Naruto: The Movie "Teaser Trailer" (2021) Live Action "Concept"
[Video: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=YKSNBIIIM_bY]

I watched the original first Naruto series as a young adult and didn't care to catch up ever since. For some strange reason, I saw this concept of the 'fan-based' trailer if I'm correct.

I don't know how to feel about this, as I always watched the Anime, but it's made professionally. I'll admit that.

Would you watch it? Feel free to use this thread as a lounge for Naruto, but please keep it Naruto/Anime based.

So excited to see this. Naruto literally defined my childhood.

I don't even remember a live action movie made out of an anime that was good, Damn, Only movie I can think of is the Speed Racer movie which I enjoyed, But I took an acid tab before going in so that may have helped, Either way I'll watch

It's a video of clips taken out of other youtubers - it's not an actual movie that's being made.

Most of the clips are taken from this guy:

I seen this a couple weeks ago and the guy behind it has put in a ton of work. He was also the guy who made this viral Naruto fight scene that was almost exactly on par with the anime.

Yes, he sure is an anime fan and a real artist. But.. would you guys watch the movie?

This actually looks pretty decent. I thought it was gonna be another train wreck.

So did I expect when I clicked the video, yet I was happily surprised. Still fan art, so I can't be sure if a HQ movie would be released ever.

I would watch it but I would not expect anything more than a visually impressive movie. As for the story goes, it would need to be compiled into several different movies. I think this "trailer" should stay a trailer, or at least make it a short movie with some storytelling elements.

Now if this were to be a live-action series, then I would have some higher expectations with the plot.
