Sadly i'm not one of those people. The everlastingly effect of violence and trauma from those videos and images is sad. They should go through quarterly mental checks

(Sep 1, 2021 08:04 AM)-Scrub Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) This would be a good job for convicts or inmates to still be able to earn money . Barely got to pay em either completely disagree, to further the torment? Prison life and irl are two completely different things. To come back to the world with the violence mentality you can get away with already causes adjustment issues. So to bombard them with violent images all day is not helping rehabilitation one bit.

So make violent people with nothing to lose more violent ?

Well if they're not being forced to do it that's fine

No, my post is agreeing with you

Right you really couldn't legally force them. But seriously would you trust them to get rid of the stuff that like? You probably couldn't trust them to do this job at all come to that but I was going to say it would be funny asking them if they wanted to do this or the laundry.

Hey next time you see someone who made an attempt to support their family by selling a drug that is now legal. Remember that life sentence they got for a harmless plant makes it all worth it. That's the other that's not prisons work, you are forced too. By influence or force, either they create such a boring environment to force you to go or they beat the sh out of you and poison your food, if they give you any. They would be all for the money facebook will pay $5–10 a person, and inmates will get .2-.7 an hour.

who's gonna call them out on it being illegal? They can force them lol. Prison is nothing like the movies.

They're lucky to be getting .2-.7 an hour. Is what it is, if anything it would benefit the owner of Facebook and still benefit the lifers who have nothing to do all day but be a lifer in a cell ?

I mean i can agree with that it's just unfair, they are still human. I would hope i feel attacked being an activist. I'm not saying you're wrong it's just that mindset of them being lesser than anyone else so they deserve those things. We've all broken they law, one bad step it could be you or I behind those walls, you'd want to be treated fairly. If you ever do break the law make sure it's federal prisons are way better

(Sep 1, 2021 08:33 AM)-Scrub Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I have been locked up, was for a majority of my childhood so I mean I know being incarcerated is butt water. But as you do the crime whatever it is you know what can happen and it's still the risk you take. So if something does happen can't really blame nobody but yourself (unless obv it isn't your fault or you're falsely imprisoned)

HAHA, of course i'll take you word for it. Jit camps are no joke where i'm from, everyone leaves with scars and stab wounds even the toughest. Great welcome party includes taking pieces of bob wire and cutting your stomach on your first day if you're not banging yet. They'll see if you snitch and if you do you're off the compound, ether by officers or stabbed. So idk what you're talking about water, stabbing someone in prison is like 30-120 days max depending how bad. That's nothing you eat that up, and keep it moving. With that being said what ever juvi you went too must have been very sweet. As far as you do they crime you're damn right, however what happens when you have no other real choice, or when you know no other way? All because your programmed to see that way, grow up around purely violent people and drug dealers you don't see glamours people or hard working individuals you know no better.

ailo - September 1, 2021, 9:02 am

Thats pretty tough, imagine all the stuff they have to go through .

A lot of them will probably end up desensitized, which will effect them in the long term in their personal life if they see something disturbing.

Yes. This is one of the instances where application of AI would be very helpful in many ways; save humans from exposure to horrific content and also, it'll be cheaper to operate. AI would have to be trained based on the data, they could likely build data collection on their current Content Moderation systems and use it to train AI.

It would still require humans to steer it and keep the fail rates low, but way less. Most likely this exists already.

Mr. Tycoon - September 3, 2021, 1:49 pm

Imagine how bad chat rooms would be. FB isn't alone in the world of moderation of posts, the others just haven't made it public yet.

Lozemlpsum - September 3, 2021, 2:00 pm

I saw this interview / disclosure. Similar story and experiences as the many people who used to work for Google (performing the "filter" manually of safe search. Child p0rn, animal tortures, accidents and more included, broke multiple people's spirit and took their ability to rest properly at night suffering from PTSD.

Large companies like; Facebook (Whatsapp & Instagram), Google, Amazon and more are not always the best examples for being good for their employees. Yet we do not take the human mental health as serious, because it is intentional. That's where I end my 2 cents here.

LeetSpeed - September 3, 2021, 3:04 pm

Even though I've seen some complete shit stuff on the net I would never want a job like that....there only so much your mind can handle before it implodes.

popZmoke - September 3, 2021, 3:17 pm

I understand you want to make a bag for yourself but you're really desperate if you're doing this shit lmao
