If you train 2 years could you beat his ass?

Yes, no doubt.

But the game would be played to my rules;

- no inside 'jobs'
- no bribe money (to lose, win, get damaged, etc)
- no 'fancy talk' upfront (chatting / debate)
- date is picked, nobody is recorded until the day is due
- all rules apply that apply to MMA.. if Jake can fight, he'll agree

Optional, but I'd pay for it;

- IF he loses, he'll tattoo my full name on his ass. Why? Humbling that YouTube ego kid down.. money, fame or not.. respect is earned, not given.

hell yeah. I mean he has been training for a long time but still. step in the ring, sucker punch his ass. KO

Easily... says every neckbeard basement dweller who says "no doubt" who has never been in a fight in their life ^

For real though, actually being in a fight is way different than saying "yeah i could kick his ass." Anybody who's actually been in serious fights or sports fighting won't say yes to this easily. Anybody who goes through extensive training (which i'm ASSUMING Jake Paul does) is thoroughly prepared for that and would put up a difficult fight.

Fuck no, and I have actually been inside a cage, As much as I dislike Jake he CAN box, He is training with the best period. He is taking this very seriously and he is actually good, He is not elite whatsoever but he would beat 95% of the population inside the boxing ring.

With that being said if it was a street fight im sure I would beat him right now with no training, Choke him out or a Kimura and take his arm home with me.

Honestly I probably couldn't, not in boxing. In a regular fight? Maybe

I could probably give him a run for his money after a few weeks of warming up tbh, I'd probably kick his ass with a little less than 2 years training, he's just a frat boy with a big ego.

Maybe with the two years of extensive training and a couple fights in for practice.

hayesh - September 11, 2021, 2:13 pm ill knock jake on his ass first round ?

Polymath - September 11, 2021, 3:58 pm

I don't think Jake Paul can beat most professional fighters, especially those in the UFC rankings who have been training all their life. However, he can beat 99% of HF users, anyone who says he will be able to knock him out are bullshitting kids who haven't been in a real fight before. I think I could maybe beat him in a street fight because he is professionally trained by some of the best coaches to fight in a ring with rules, but on the street its a completely different game with much less rules or no rules at all. The knuckles need to be conditioned, punching with gloves on won't condition knuckles better than those who do bare knuckle boxing, tyres or punching heavy bags with bare hands. But who knows, a mans true nature comes out in a street fight when theres no cameras or audience. You really should not underestimate anyone in a fight, that is why I would never say I could beat someone in a fight with 100% certainty. However, if I was going into a fight I would say it with 100% certainty that I would win because mindset is important, fighting isnt just physical but psychological too.
