Thread: [\[Guide\] Withdraw BTC or ETH from exchanges\(binance with 1% fees\)](#)

loadman - September 13, 2021, 8:53 am

Hello, I will teach you how to withdraw BTC or virtually any crypto from any exchange with a low or even virtually nonexistent fee.

Some points to keep in mind before starting:

1) Most if not all exchanges charge a FLAT fee to withdraw crypto from their custody. This means some crypto is cheaper to withdraw and it might not be relevant to use this guide if you want to withdraw one of those cryptocurrencies with low withdrawal fee.

2) LTC, XMR and some other (cheap) cryptocurrency (doge and some other memecoins too) have extremely low withdrawal fee and this is what we will use to withdraw our funds if we want to withdraw for instance, BTC or ETH from the platform. You have to check if the crypto you want to withdraw has a high or low withdrawal fee in order to make this guide efficient.

3) Some stablecoins have high withdrawal fees due to the cost of withdrawals through the ERC20 (ETHEREUM) network. This means that this method, might not be useful for you IF you want to withdraw ERC20 tokens because the ERC20 network fee is often high and makes this method similar to simply withdrawing the token straight from the exchange.

Requirements:

I highly advise that if you will need to withdraw BTC, you use the lightning network for this as it will make the transaction fee to you, significantly cheaper or free depending on the amount.

For the example I will use a lightning network wallet called "Muun" which has only bitcoin compatibility (it's not a multi-coin wallet) but supports lightning network.

For the example I will use a value of 10$ worth of crypto, to receive 10$ worth of BTC on my Muun wallet (which would otherwise cost 15$ or 0.0005 BTC on binance)

We will use Fixed Float(<https://fixedfloat.com/>) which is an instant cryptocurrency exchange with no KYC and completely automated. Further on, called FF for ease.

We will go to binance, and convert whatever crypto we have which we want to withdraw, to Litecoin.

This is the amount I will exchange from LTC to BTC. It's roughly 10.15$ after withdrawal fee of 0.001 LTC

I will go to FF and create an order for the amount of LTC I want to withdraw, minus 0.001 LTC (binance's withdrawal fee)

I will go to Muun, click on "receive" and select lightning network and copy the invoice.

Then I will go to FF and paste the amount of LTC I want to withdraw and I will deduct the 0.001 LTC from that amount.

select Litecoin, and BTC (lightning network) ONLY SELECT LIGHTNING NETWORK IF YOU WILL USE LIGHTNING NETWORK. Otherwise, select normal BTC and paste a normal BTC address.

I will paste my Lightning network invoice on the "receiving address" slot on FF.

I will click on the "exchange now" button on FF.

at the same time, I will process the withdrawal from binance: REMEMBER TO ADD THE 0.001 LTC which is Binance's fee to the total amount you will withdraw.

Once withdrawn from binance, the FF screen will change from THIS to either a success screen (if the confirmations are received) or a screen that shows the number of confirmations that are missing until the exchange is completed (for litecoin, 2 confirmations)

This is the amount received in the end:

This means I withdrew BITCOIN from binance, effectively, for 25 cents. Which is way cheaper than 15$ (fixed rate on binance).

Feel free to use this to withdraw funds from any exchange (but do your due diligence before adding any address to the receiver slot)

what is your issue maybe i can help you out

UNKNOWNNI - October 2, 2021, 2:06 pm

Fixedfloat is really a good service.

funtela - October 2, 2021, 3:30 pm

This is awesome. Would it work to withdraw LINK & ETH from Crypto.com app?

Ninja™ - October 16, 2021, 9:56 am

Good recommendation. But just wanna point out that FF can freeze your funds if they deem your tx risky and you would need to perform KYC to get them released. No you cant ask for refund.

Did it happened to you? I use them every day for quick withdrawals from binance.

didnt happen to me yet? works fine everytime

xVulnerable - October 21, 2021, 6:39 am

Nice...I didn't know about this method. However this won't work for high amounts since there is a 0.1% binance fee & 0.5% FF fee.

Effexion - October 22, 2021, 7:33 am

Mate, I can't thank you enough. I had $40 locked in KuKoin that I couldn't withdraw. +3 and quickloved.

xVulnerable - October 22, 2021, 8:56 am

To clarify, this can be done with another wallet lik electrum instead of Muun? Do we put the receiving btc address instead of the lightning invoice?

Do we put the receiving btc address instead of the lightning invoice? yes u can but to be on the safe side, if u made an order for example 100$ on fixedfloat, i reccomend u sending like 101$ to be on the safeside or just little extra subtracting from the fees

For what reason do we put a little extra?

Koyote - October 22, 2021, 9:45 am

Very interesting, this could be ridiculously useful in the near future! Bit worrying they can freeze funds though, so I'd need to do some more digging on their reasonings first before committing.

Regulus - October 22, 2021, 9:53 am

I have some bucks laying there but can't withdraw it since minimum withdraw amount is $60 or something, or 0.001.
Riperoni.

Ah brilliant, thank you! I'll check them out and keep them as an option too. Can't hurt to have backups!

jecoylecroy - October 22, 2021, 2:45 pm

So basically that trick is in the lightning currency exchange, isn't it?

loadman - October 22, 2021, 3:39 pm

Someone sticky this thread

Thanks a lot. I have some amount in Binance. This gives great knowledge on how to withdraw with low fees. Thank you.

funtela - October 31, 2021, 12:26 pm

Is there any risk of losing your coins doing this? Any risk at all?

Nice! I wanna use this to move my coins from Crypto.com to Atomic Wallet.

funtela - November 2, 2021, 10:12 am

Will this work to withdraw CRO from Crypto.com ?

Prettykitty - October 21, 2022, 7:29 pm

Really neat info, didn't know this existed until today. Anyone use this or Boltz recently?
