Thread: Jimmy Johns or Subway?

[(5)] - September 25, 2021, 2:08 pm

You have to choose one of the two, Jimmy Johns or Subway. Which do you choose? Don't say anything stupid like another business. Only choose between the two

I choose Jimmy Johns. But I know someone who wholeheartedly would choose Subway over JJ.

Cap - September 25, 2021, 2:27 pm

I can't say I've ever had Jimmy Johns so I have to go with Subway. It would probably be Jimmy Johns if I tried it.

handres2018 - September 25, 2021, 2:27 pm

Subway is better to me ngl

Fair enough. Is it available there and you just haven't tried it? Or it's not really available near you?

I used to like Subway more for the longest time. It was the bread. Until I started getting the Italian Night Club from JJ Favorites. It turned me, lol

Dog. - September 25, 2021, 2:43 pm

I could live off Subway. Never tried Jimmy John's, but recently been seeing some ads that makes my mouth water. I haven't gotten around to dropping by one though.

Any suggestions for my first?

What do you normally get from Subway? That will make it easier to suggest. I personally would get the Spicy Italian loaded with veggies when I'd go. Or the chicken. At Jimmy Johns I almost always get the Italian Night club from the Favorites menu. (I recommend the favorites menu because it comes with cheese and more meat than the originals)

That's funny, the Spicy Italian is my go-to and I rarely get anything else. I'll try the Italian Night Club, but what's the difference between Subway and Jimmy John's to you? I looked it up and other than slightly different meats the actual subs look pretty similar along and so do the options of what you can put in it

Haha that's awesome. They taste very different. Jimmy Johns tastes more gourmet in my opinion, even though it's not lol

I think the biggest differences would be the quality of meats, vegetables offered, and the bread.

Hope you report back with what you ended up thinking. I'm curious.

blackrose_x0x0 - September 25, 2021, 2:55 pm

I'm having a really hard deciding between the two haha, although I'm leaning more towards Subway. Maybe it's just the nostalgia of that subway taste that brings me back to my childhood. Either way both are great imo.

This thread just reminded me that I haven't gotten either Subway or Jimmy Johns in over a year now. Might have to change that this upcoming week.

They get you addicted to eating it. And you eat it until you're literally sick of it. Is there any other way?

bk randy - September 25, 2021, 8:25 pm

You know the owner of Jimmy John's is a trophy hunter and has killed stuff like elephants, rhinos and lions?

Meanwhile the old CEO of Subway was a creep.

JJ has dank bread, I never had a sandwich from them though

Subway is pretty fire when you go to like a 5 star subway, I've only had one experience that I was actually really damn happy with how good it was, any other time it's just be pretty good to good. Lol

Kaiba Corp - October 4, 2021, 12:13 pm

Subway all the way, it's the only place you can say you can fit a footlojg on your mouth whiteout being judged.

Prettykitty - October 4, 2021, 12:39 pm

Not sure what jimmy Johns is, but subway is alright. I heard their bread is categorized as cake in Ireland since it's sugar content is too high to be bread. That was a while ago. Also that one time subway was known to have the same chemical in yoga mats in their bread. I'd still have subway now since they don't do that these days.

[$(5)] - October 13, 2021, 9:56 pm

One thing I hate about Jimmy Johns is that if you get condiments, it can make your bread really soggy and wet. I feel like Subway kind of soaks it up, where it just sits on top of the Jimmy Johns bread. Yuck

They're all over the Midwest. I'm not sure about Cali, but I'd assume so. I can find a JJ easier than a Subway here.

Makes sense then lol

Also you don't have to do much to surpass Subways quality, I had some subs in shitty branches where I immediately regretted it

Yes in my opinion. It's different than subway though. The biggest perk of Jimmy Johns is their "speedy fast delivery" option. It's $2.99 for delivery, but they deliver your sandwich is like less than 30 mins after ordering. And that includes the time to make it. I've never had a bad sandwich from there, but do sometimes crave subway over JJ. They're different, JJ only serves cold subs, but both fast food sub makers.

device - October 16, 2021, 2:34 pm

When I worked at Subway there was this guy that would come every day at lunchtime. He would order a footlong with just carrots in it.

It cost him like $5 for a carrot sandwich with no meat and no sauce.

As someone who has tried both, I'd have to give it up for Jimmy John's. Subway is just the same old stuff. If you have a specific Subway you always go to, try getting a worker to hook you up with extra meats or whatever.

Jimmy Johns is pretty good. The reason I compared the two is because of how common both of them seemed, even after research. However many users who reply on this thread are not as familiar with JJ as I would have thought.

Nonetheless, I'm happy to see another person say JJ over Subway.

Lmao you're right. Or they're meth'd up like a guy at my local 24/7 Subway before covid19 that I had gone to. He was literally so screwed up he could barely make my damn sandwich. LOL

Jimmy Johns has some better quality, better taste. Subway better pricing right, attempting to replicate JJ. Still good, I'd choose Jimmy Johns.

#9, the italian night club

Has to be my favorite by far, my friend. You won't regret it. If you like condiments, ask for extra. And only get the Giant if you want a 16 inch sub LOL it's massive, even compared to Subway's footlong.

You can also choose to get your sandwich wrapped with lettuce instead of bread, don't think I mentioned that in this thread yet. It's actually really good. I still get the normal meats, etc but will occasionally get it lettuce wrapped to change it up.

Older thread, but yes I do really love jimmy johns.

However they both are pretty different. I use to work at subway and I like the variety of options they have for breads and different combos.

Their meat is a little sus because of how it's packaged, but the veggies are fresh.

Jimmy johns bread is amazing and I do like their higher quality meats.

Both are big corporations so I don't always like supporting them.

Yeah it's huge here! They call themselves 'freaky fast delivery' because sometimes it's literally like 20 minutes delivery time after ordering. Before covid it was definitely much faster than now, but they were huge on delivery before UberEats and all that BS became huge.

Damn, we have some delivery services that take like 10-20 minutes as well. But It's mostly for groceries, Mcdonalds is also pretty fast, but Subway takes like almost an hour for instance. Jimmy John's looks super tasty though, gotta check it out next time I visit the states.
