Thread: I want to start mining, what setup do you recommend?

Roberto Scorpius Malfoy - October 1, 2021, 7:05 am

I was looking to start mining together with a few friends, our budget is $100,000, we would like to go for ETH since its one of the famous crypto.

What minings do you recommend?

xf0xalz - October 1, 2021, 7:06 am

ETH will be Proof of stake soon.

Be careful spending that such money for a rig specifically for "ETH" as it will be no more possible to mine it when they launch Ethereum 2.0

Nice best of luck man can't wait for eth 2.0

What other coin do you recommend then? Also are you sure about your statement?

Is bitcoin totally dead when it comes to mining?

Lets see.

Hope you are right since I love the profit from my miners.

Eth will soon become PoS so don't mine.

BTC is kinda akward as in it's stil profitable, but is it worth the effort? You'll have to look into what your miner will provide you as return, how long to cover the cost of the miner(s) and already have some funds for electricity just in case. After that it's all profit.

If BTC doesn't make your list in expected estimated returns look into other mineable coins like Monero. However the research must be extensive for example if Dash is your best pick keep in mind you'll need an Asic miner not gpus.

I wouldn't suggest mining however take a look at Divi, the recently released mobile app that lets you open a Staking Vault. This means helping provide security to the network and get 20% ROI on your investment. The best thing is you get to keep your initial investment and just earn on top of it. I have been doing it for a while now using a different setup but seeing as they just released their new mobile wallet I would highly recommend it for a beginner. Sure you can go mine BTC or the likes but you are going to spend 10k+ on equipment that'll be useless in 2-3 years.. Why not invest that 10k into a solid coin and earn 20%. After 2-3 years you still got your 10k + (2k x 3 years = 6k)

Now as always do your own research and don't just do it because of what someone said on the internet but hey a bit of friendly advice. It's what I do and I have been earning a nice sum so far. The price is looking very nice at the minute also so you can get in pretty cheap.

The best part is you can cash out at any time. Take a look at the Divi thread: Divi for the Win by Omni

BTC Mining might be your best option.

i suggest liquidity mining

Semmenial - October 1, 2021, 8:50 pm

I say you find a build you're interested in, enter the configurations into a mining pool and see your estimated profits.

loadman - October 2, 2021, 4:34 am bookmarked this thread to know every1s opinion about this, as electricity is free(atleast for me) and i wont have problems with houses to setup.

pubgmobilecheat - October 2, 2021, 6:27 am

There is no right answer when it comes to mining. You either do it or you don't. Idk if investing directly in some coin would be better option since you'd have to be vigilant and trade it in order to gain profit while waiting for it to rise in price to gain even more (multiple coins are also an option).

If you go for GPU mining setup, then you can mine ETH while it's still Proof Of Work - mineable. After that you can switch to Raven coin since it has good profitability, at least for now.

Anyhow, when ETH goes to Proof Of Stage protocol, you will just switch to next best thing like everyone else.

If electricity is free, you can even mine Lite coin, Dash and similar, hold it and sell when they spikes up to gain profit.

That Nicehash miner looks like a great option for beginners since you just need to run it and it mines a random coin that is most profitable at the moment, it automatically converts it to and pays you up in bitcoin.

I was thinking to buy 50 3090 GPUs, how hard it it to build rigs that contain 50 3090 gpus?

50 3090 GPUs is insane, you would probably need to have the rig in a cool place. I am guessing you're not going to have the rig at your house?

No, my friend owns a warehouse, the whole thing is 800 m2, is that enough?

800 m2 is pretty much the size of a futsal court, you should honestly have no problem with space. I would however also do some thinking about security, will you have any cameras in the warehouse?

That's the size of the whole building, the rigs will be in rooms which is 12m2 and some a little bit bigger, is that good enough?

Cameras will be there, but I am more worried about how hard it is to setup.

I don't know much about mining rigs in a technical sense, but logistically you should have no problem setting it up in a 12 m2 room.

These are the GPUs I will go for

ASUS ROG STRIX GeForce RTX 3090 24GB Gaming OC (1)
ASUS TUF GeForce RTX 3090 24GB Gaming (5)
ASUS TUF GeForce RTX 3090 24GB Gaming OC (30)

The other ones will come at a later point, but I will start with these, what do you think about them?
What should I mine?

Like I said, I can give advice on the logistic department, but mining itself ain't my strong suit, sorry.

MSRP, meaning Manufacturer's Suggested Retail Price. Not scalpers prices.
