

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: My Dad Punched a Stripper

neightworks. - October 1, 2021, 5:35 pm

When I was young, my brothers and I snuck a copy of San Andreas into the house. We spent days holed up in our basement taking turns playing, and down there my parents didn't bother us too much. In order to get tons of money for guns (we had yet to figure out my parents' dialup password so cheats weren't a thing for us yet), we would go to the strip club and stand on the stage, absorbing the money dudes threw at the women and just let the game sit for 10-20 minutes. We had to be careful though because sometimes the strippers would do a move and bump into CJ and the bouncers would shoot the place up. One day while I was playing my mom yelled down to the basement at us to get ready, we're going to Pizza Hut. In a stroke of genius, I drove to the GTA strip club, got on the stage, and then turned the TV off and we left. It was to be the heist of the century.

My dad, however, was at church at this time, practicing for a gospel concert he was singing in. He always filmed the practices so he could take notes at home upon playback, and this time was no different. While my mom and brothers and I were still at the Hut, he arrived at home and plugged his camcorder into the VCR. We had just one VCR, and it was connected to the basement TV.

Back at the Hut, my mom gets a phone call. She puts her napkin down and slowly looks around the table at us and says 'ooookay' a few times into the phone in this really calculating, specific way that she always did when she knew us kids were in trouble before we did. Naturally, it was at this point that we kids knew we were in trouble. For what, though, we didn't know.

After a very quiet minivan ride, we get home and my mom says "Boys why don't we go down to the basement. Your dad wants to show you his gospel practice downstairs." It was then at THIS point we knew why we were in trouble. So we drag our feet down the stairs, and lo and behold, my dad is sitting on the couch, TV on, a stripper's polygonal titties swung stiffly back and forth onscreen to En Vogue's "My Lovin'", with CJ standing mere inches away, collecting money.

My dad starts in, "boys I don't even know where to begin. This PlayStation was a blessing to you for Christmas and this is how you repay us? By breaking our trust??" He is holding the controller up now, gesticulating with it. "Here I am, practicing to bring glory to God, and-" but he was cut off, as he inadvertently squeezed the controller, causing CJ to punch the stripper.

My entire family stands in silence, watching together as the bouncers in the strip club shoot the place up for what seems like an eternity. After the shooting stops, and CJ appears in front of the hospital, I look back and see my mom silently weeping into her hand. I look at my dad as a single tear rolls down his cheek and he prays under his breath. After another eternity of silence, without a word, my dad bends down, disconnects the PlayStation, walks back to the family computer, disconnects it, goes to his car and drives away. For the next four months he kept the PS2 and PC locked in his office at work.

While I know this is IDK thing, this had me dying.

siddy357 - October 1, 2021, 5:37 pm

(Oct 1, 2021 05:35 PM)neightworks. Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) When I was young, my brothers and I snuck a copy of San Andreas into the house. We spent days holed up in our basement taking turns playing, and down there my parents didn't bother us too much. In order to get tons of money for guns (we had yet to figure out my parents' dialup password so cheats weren't a thing for us yet), we would go to the strip club and stand on the stage, absorbing the money dudes threw at the women and just let the game sit for 10-20 minutes. We had to be careful though because sometimes the strippers would do a move and bump into CJ and the bouncers would shoot the place up. One day while I was playing my mom yelled down to the basement at us to get ready, we're going to Pizza Hut. In a stroke of genius, I drove to the GTA strip club, got on the stage, and then turned the TV off and we left. It was to be the heist of the century.

My dad, however, was at church at this time, practicing for a gospel concert he was singing in. He always filmed the practices so he could take notes at home upon playback, and this time was no different. While my mom and brothers and I were still at the Hut, he arrived at home and plugged his camcorder into the VCR. We had just one VCR, and it was connected to the basement TV.

Back at the Hut, my mom gets a phone call. She puts her napkin down and slowly looks around the table at us and says 'oooookay' a few times into the phone in this really calculating, specific way that she always did when she knew us kids were in trouble before we did. Naturally, it was at this point that we kids knew we were in trouble. For what, though, we didn't know.

After a very quiet minivan ride, we get home and my mom says "Boys why don't we go down to the basement. Your dad wants to show you his gospel practice downstairs." It was then at THIS point we knew why we were in trouble. So we drag our feet down the stairs, and lo and behold, my dad is sitting on the couch, TV on, a stripper's polygonal titties swung stiffly back and forth onscreen to En Vogue's "My Lovin'", with CJ standing mere inches away, collecting money.

My dad starts in, "boys I don't even know where to begin. This PlayStation was a blessing to you for Christmas and this is how you repay us? By breaking our trust??" He is holding the controller up now, gesticulating with it. "Here I am, practicing to bring glory to God, and-" but he was cut off, as he inadvertently squeezed the controller, causing CJ to punch the stripper.

My entire family stands in silence, watching together as the bouncers in the strip club shoot the place up for what seems like an eternity. After the shooting stops, and CJ appears in front of the hospital, I look back and see my mom silently weeping into her hand. I look at my dad as a single tear rolls down his cheek and he prays under his breath. After another eternity of silence, without a word, my dad bends down, disconnects the PlayStation, walks back to the family computer, disconnects it, goes to his car and drives away. For the next four months he kept the PS2 and PC locked in his office at work.

While I know this is IDK thing, this had me dying.
that is one hell of a story mate.

neightworks. - October 1, 2021, 5:38 pm

(Oct 1, 2021 05:37 PM)siddy357 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) that is one hell of a story mate.

I found it on a a facebook ad too, I'm a sucker for those.

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=6143927>

siddy357 - October 1, 2021, 5:39 pm

(Oct 1, 2021 05:38 PM)neightworks. Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I found it on a a facebook ad too, I'm a sucker for those. <https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=6143927> lol i thought it was a kind of own experience.

neightworks. - October 1, 2021, 5:41 pm

(Oct 1, 2021 05:39 PM)siddy357 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) lol i thought it was a kind of own experience.

Nope, just another ad riddled facebook link (Installing Pi-Hole was the best purchase I ever made)

Dog. - October 1, 2021, 5:43 pm

(Oct 1, 2021 05:39 PM)siddy357 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) lol i thought it was a kind of own experience. It was too good for it to be a personal experience, this is cypypasta type shit.

siddy357 - October 1, 2021, 5:44 pm

(Oct 1, 2021 05:43 PM)Dog. Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) It was too good for it to be a personal experience, this is cypypasta type shit.

most of the people share their experiences here as you are an anon most of the time.

neightworks. - October 1, 2021, 5:45 pm

(Oct 1, 2021 05:43 PM)Dog. Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) It was too good for it to be a personal experience, this is cypypasta type shit.

For reference everything IDK posts is copied from somewhere else, which is why I mentioned him.

Dog. - October 1, 2021, 5:50 pm

(Oct 1, 2021 05:45 PM)neightworks. Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) For reference everything IDK posts is copied from somewhere else, which is why I mentioned him.

That flew over my head, makes a lot more sense. Thanks for explaining :)

(Oct 1, 2021 05:44 PM)siddy357 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) most of the people share their experiences here as you are an anon most of the time.

That's fair.

siddy357 - October 1, 2021, 5:51 pm

(Oct 1, 2021 05:50 PM)Dog. Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) That flew over my head, makes a lot more sense. Thanks for explaining :)

That's fair.

how is your day mate?

Dog. - October 1, 2021, 5:56 pm

(Oct 1, 2021 05:51 PM)siddy357 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) how is your day mate?

Going well, working overtime atm but don't mind it... you?

Sky - October 1, 2021, 5:56 pm

That's one way to fist somebody I guess.

siddy357 - October 1, 2021, 5:57 pm

(Oct 1, 2021 05:56 PM)Dog. Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Going well, working overtime atm but don't mind it... you? overtime on a friday not a good start to the month and i am kind of having an ok day atm.

neightworks. - October 1, 2021, 5:58 pm

(Oct 1, 2021 05:56 PM)Sky Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) That's one way to fist somebody I guess.

He's a man of the lord Sky, he uses two hands clamped together.

Sky - October 1, 2021, 5:59 pm

(Oct 1, 2021 05:58 PM)neightworks. Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) He's a man of the lord Sky, he uses two hands clamped together.

Hit that chick with an uppercunt.

Dog. - October 1, 2021, 6:17 pm

(Oct 1, 2021 05:57 PM)siddy357 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) overtime on a friday not a good start to the month and i am kind of having an ok day atm.

It's not too bad. I get paid extra and today's not stressful.

Ok days are nice, but is something not going well?

siddy357 - October 1, 2021, 6:19 pm

(Oct 1, 2021 06:17 PM)Dog. Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) It's not too bad. I get paid extra and today's not stressful.

Ok days are nice, but is something not going well?
feels good to get paid for extra hours.

most of our guys never gets paid for extra hours they put in.

Dopamine - October 1, 2021, 6:24 pm

(Oct 1, 2021 05:35 PM)neightworks. Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) When I was young, my brothers and I snuck a copy of San Andreas into the house. We spent days holed up in our basement taking turns playing, and down there my parents didn't bother us too much. In order to get tons of money for guns (we had yet to figure out my parents' dialup password so cheats weren't a thing for us yet), we would go to the strip club and stand on the stage, absorbing the money dudes threw at the women and just let the game sit for 10-20 minutes. We had to be careful though because sometimes the strippers would do a move and bump into CJ and the bouncers would shoot the place up. One day while I was playing my mom yelled down to the basement at us to get ready, we're going to Pizza Hut. In a stroke of genius, I drove to the GTA strip club, got on the stage, and then turned the TV off and we left. It was to be the heist of the century.

My dad, however, was at church at this time, practicing for a gospel concert he was singing in. He always filmed the practices so he could take notes at home upon playback, and this time was no different. While my mom and brothers and I were still at the Hut, he arrived at home and plugged his camcorder into the VCR. We had just one VCR, and it was connected to the basement TV.

Back at the Hut, my mom gets a phone call. She puts her napkin down and slowly looks around the table at us and says 'oooookay' a few times into the phone in this really calculating, specific way that she always did when she knew us kids were in trouble before we did. Naturally, it was at this point that we kids knew we were in trouble. For what, though, we didn't know.

After a very quiet minivan ride, we get home and my mom says "Boys why don't we go down to the basement. Your dad wants to show you his gospel practice downstairs." It was then at THIS point we knew why we were in trouble. So we drag our feet down the stairs, and lo and behold, my dad is sitting on the couch, TV on, a stripper's polygonal titties swung stiffly back and forth onscreen to En Vogue's "My Lovin'", with CJ standing mere inches away, collecting money.

My dad starts in, "boys I don't even know where to begin. This PlayStation was a blessing to you for Christmas and this is how you repay us? By breaking our trust??" He is holding the controller up now, gesticulating with it. "Here I am, practicing to bring glory to God, and-" but he was cut off, as he inadvertently squeezed the controller, causing CJ to punch the stripper.

My entire family stands in silence, watching together as the bouncers in the strip club shoot the place up for what seems like an eternity. After the shooting stops, and CJ appears in front of the hospital, I look back and see my mom silently weeping into her hand. I look at my dad as a single tear rolls down his cheek and he prays under his breath. After another eternity of silence, without a word, my dad bends down, disconnects the PlayStation, walks back to the family computer, disconnects it, goes to his car and drives away. For the next four months he kept the PS2 and PC locked in his office at work.

While I know this is IDK thing, this had me dying.
I'd appreciate a tl;dr please daddy

neightworks. - October 1, 2021, 6:32 pm

(Oct 1, 2021 06:24 PM)Dopamine Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I'd appreciate a tl;dr please daddy
It is a copy pasta, there is no tldr.

Blazin - October 1, 2021, 7:30 pm

Well, that was a interesting read. ???

IDK - October 2, 2021, 1:48 am

When I was young, my brothers and I snuck a copy of San Andreas into the house. We spent days holed up in our basement taking turns playing, and down there my parents didn't bother us too much. In order to get tons of money for guns (we had yet to figure out my parents' dialup password so cheats weren't a thing for us yet), we would go to the strip club and stand on the stage, absorbing the money dudes threw at the women and just let the game sit for 10-20 minutes. We had to be careful though because sometimes the strippers would do a move and bump into CJ and the bouncers would shoot the place up. One day while I was playing my mom yelled down to the basement at us to get ready, we're going to Pizza Hut. In a stroke of genius, I drove to the GTA strip club, got on the stage, and then turned the TV off and we left. It was to be the heist of the century.

My dad, however, was at church at this time, practicing for a gospel concert he was singing in. He always filmed the practices so he could take notes at home upon playback, and this time was no different. While my mom and brothers and I were still at the Hut, he arrived at home and plugged his camcorder into the VCR. We had just one VCR, and it was connected to the basement TV.

Back at the Hut, my mom gets a phone call. She puts her napkin down and slowly looks around the table at us and says 'oooookay' a few times into the phone in this really calculating, specific way that she always did when she knew us kids were in trouble before we did. Naturally, it was at this point that we kids knew we were in trouble. For what, though, we didn't know.

After a very quiet minivan ride, we get home and my mom says "Boys why don't we go down to the basement. Your dad wants to show you his gospel practice downstairs." It was then at THIS point we knew why we were in trouble. So we drag our feet down the stairs, and lo and behold, my dad is sitting on the couch, TV on, a stripper's polygonal titties swung stiffly back and forth onscreen to En Vogue's "My Lovin'", with CJ standing mere inches away, collecting money.

My dad starts in, "boys I don't even know where to begin. This PlayStation was a blessing to you for Christmas and this is how you repay us? By breaking our trust??" He is holding the controller up now, gesticulating with it. "Here I am, practicing to bring glory to God, and-" but he was cut off, as he inadvertently squeezed the controller, causing CJ to punch the stripper.

My entire family stands in silence, watching together as the bouncers in the strip club shoot the place up for what seems like an eternity. After the shooting stops, and CJ appears in front of the hospital, I look back and see my mom silently weeping into her hand. I look at my dad as a single tear rolls down his cheek and he prays under his breath. After another eternity of silence, without a word, my dad bends down, disconnects the PlayStation, walks back to the family computer, disconnects it, goes to his car and drives away. For the next four months he kept the PS2 and PC locked in his office at work.

Chrisy - October 2, 2021, 2:39 am

Quality story boss lol, when I was young, I was allowed to play GTA IV and none of my friends were,

i thought it was amazing, then as soon as GTA V came out I wasn't allowed to play that but all my friends were, was the toughest part of my childhood I think

Xen - October 2, 2021, 2:46 am

(Oct 1, 2021 05:35 PM)neightworks. Wrote: CITE When I was young, my brothers and I snuck a copy of San Andreas into the house. We spent days holed up in our basement taking turns playing, and down there my parents didn't bother us too much. In order to get tons of money for guns (we had yet to figure out my parents' dialup password so cheats weren't a thing for us yet), we would go to the strip club and stand on the stage, absorbing the money dudes threw at the women and just let the game sit for 10-20 minutes. We had to be careful though because sometimes the strippers would do a move and bump into CJ and the bouncers would shoot the place up. One day while I was playing my mom yelled down to the basement at us to get ready, we're going to Pizza Hut. In a stroke of genius, I drove to the GTA strip club, got on the stage, and then turned the TV off and we left. It was to be the heist of the century.

My dad, however, was at church at this time, practicing for a gospel concert he was singing in. He always filmed the practices so he could take notes at home upon playback, and this time was no different. While my mom and brothers and I were still at the Hut, he arrived at home and plugged his camcorder into the VCR. We had just one VCR, and it was connected to the basement TV.

Back at the Hut, my mom gets a phone call. She puts her napkin down and slowly looks around the table at us and says 'oooookay' a few times into the phone in this really calculating, specific way that she always did when she knew us kids were in trouble before we did. Naturally, it was at this point that we kids knew we were in trouble. For what, though, we didn't know.

After a very quiet minivan ride, we get home and my mom says "Boys why don't we go down to the basement. Your dad wants to show you his gospel practice downstairs." It was then at THIS point we knew why we were in trouble. So we drag our feet down the stairs, and lo and behold, my dad is sitting on the couch, TV on, a stripper's polygonal titties swung stiffly back and forth onscreen to En Vogue's "My Lovin'", with CJ standing mere inches away, collecting money.

My dad starts in, "boys I don't even know where to begin. This PlayStation was a blessing to you for Christmas and this is how you repay us? By breaking our trust??" He is holding the controller up now, gesticulating with it. "Here I am, practicing to bring glory to God, and-" but he was cut off, as he inadvertently squeezed the controller, causing CJ to punch the stripper.

My entire family stands in silence, watching together as the bouncers in the strip club shoot the place up for what seems like an eternity. After the shooting stops, and CJ appears in front of the hospital, I look back and see my mom silently weeping into her hand. I look at my dad as a single tear rolls down his cheek and he prays under his breath. After another eternity of silence, without a word, my dad bends down, disconnects the PlayStation, walks back to the family computer, disconnects it, goes to his car and drives away. For the next four months he kept the PS2 and PC locked in his office at work.

While I know this is IDK thing, this had me dying.
This is gold.

Great find on the story, love things like this.

Kaiba Corp - October 2, 2021, 5:07 pm

Once I read CJ I knew where this was headed... Good read though worth a chuckle

Bankrupt - October 2, 2021, 5:12 pm

holy fuck lol this was a ride to read