Pepsi or Coca Cola ?

When I was a kid, I always preferred Pepsi. As I got older I developed more of a taste for Coca Cola.

Dr Pepper is also really high up there.

jecoylecroy - October 7, 2021, 2:23 am

I like coca cola then Pepsi.

Michael - October 7, 2021, 2:28 am

I believe there is a similar thread already.

Voted coca cola though.

Lindros - October 7, 2021, 2:52 am

I think they're both pretty terrible for you.

As for taste, I like both of them. However, fuck soda I'll take an unsweetened tea any day of the week over soda.

BL4CK98 - October 7, 2021, 2:53 am

I enjoy Pepsi more as the sugars in the cola make my teeth feel weird as they are very sensitive.

Proxied - October 7, 2021, 3:07 am

I'm more for Coca Cola to be honest.

Xen - October 7, 2021, 3:15 am

There was a similar thread but basically, my answer was Coca Cola Zero and Pepsi Max.

But I do every now and then enjoy Dr. Pepper.

In?sane? - October 7, 2021, 3:15 am

Another thread? Coke all the way.

Velma - October 7, 2021, 3:27 am

Coca Cola over pepsi any day of the week, but I would rather drink a Dr Pepper probably my favourite fizzy drink, but in general I avoid all fizzy drinks and drink water.

Proxied - October 7, 2021, 3:43 am

Not one vote for Pespi yet.

Eran - October 7, 2021, 4:03 am

I don't drink either (only when mixing with whiskey, then its coca cola)

Giin - October 7, 2021, 4:06 am

Swordsman - October 7, 2021, 11:21 am

Prettykitty - October 7, 2021, 12:03 pm

I like coca cola, pepsis is alright but coke if I had to pick one.

4253 - October 7, 2021, 12:10 pm

Definetly coca cola but pepsis is also decent

Smexy - October 7, 2021, 3:22 pm

I don't know why, but when I drink strong alcohol I prefer to mix pepsis with it.

Besides restaurants that don't have Pepsi, the only coke I drink is Mexican bottles of Coca Cola.

I'm pretty sure you get those same options in third world countries too, they're not all that expensive. I recently saw an article about a small town called Chiapas where all the residents drink mostly coca cola, because it's just cheaper and easier for them to get. It's obviously wreaking havoc on their health, but it's so bizarre how they're all hooked on it really.

It's weird, because while I'm not surprised at that fact, I still kind of am, if that makes sense? I can see why they'd be so prolific, with how they promote and how far spread they are (mostly for capturing resources' sake) but you'd have thought that all these human rights groups would have put things in place a long time ago to prevent people getting hooked, or having it as their only main source of moisture!

I've just had a random memory though, of being out in the sticks in Vietnam, like right out in the jungle as a teen with a small group, and there was genuinely a Coca Cola vending machine that was hooked up to solar panels to keep it running. No one around, no shack, no workers, just a random machine. I have a picture of it somewhere, I'll try to find it because it looked like it was an art installation with how random it was, but it did work.

All you poor fools who prefer Coke are brainwashed!

...the Pepsi Challenge wasn't just an ad gimmick. It really is true that blind taste tests suggest that people like it better than Coke. Yet people keep buying more Coke. One theory of this "Pepsi Paradox," described by Lone Frank in Scientific American, is that we should take the Pepsi Challenge at face value. Coke's victory is a triumph of branding over flavor, and a clear sign that consumer companies should invest lots of money in advertising. Researchers intrigued by the paradox have suggested that Coke's ads actually rewire the human brain.

When Read Montague of Baylor College Medicine performed a version of the Pepsi Challenge with subjects hooked up to an fMRI machine, he found something interesting. In blind taste tests, most people preferred Pepsi, and Pepsi was associated with a higher level of activity in an area of the brain known as the ventral putamen, which helps us evaluate different flavors. By contrast, in a nonblind test, Coke was more popular and was also associated with increased activity in the medial prefrontal cortex. Montague's interpretation: This prefrontal activity represented the higher-thinking functions of the brain associating the soda with ad campaigns and, in effect, overriding the taste buds.
