Mr. Tycoon - October 15, 2021, 3:26 pm

I stopped a guy from robbing another guy, a local drug addict/homeless career criminal. Turns out, he was released from prison today.

Apparently he asked my partner where I was.

Yin Yang - October 15, 2021, 3:27 pm

That's crazy, how did you know he was released from prison that day? I'm guessing the officer told you?

oRequiem - October 15, 2021, 4:15 pm

Stay safe bro, never let your guard down.

Nope, I walked out of my apartment and my partner told me he asked where I was, then when she came to get me, he walked off.

Maxorg - October 15, 2021, 4:32 pm

Keep your guard up. Be sure to file a report if he engages with you.

Is he the type of person that would attack you?

He and his drug addict friend attacked an old man which leads a group of guys to confront them, he coward away and the other bloke took the brunt of it.

To me he will probably try sometime, he has been given a restriction order to prevent him from causing anti-social behaviour in public but was once charged for intimidating a witness. ??????????

False King - October 15, 2021, 4:37 pm

If he contacted your partner, I'd for sure inform the police about this. At least they can make a note about it, and when something happens, they'll be more prepared.

Scoppa - October 15, 2021, 4:48 pm

Don't take this with a grain of salt. Call the 9-1-1 rn. He looks vindictive.

I chased him through the town until a cop was called about someone jumping over a garden fence. (Him)

He ran into a building and by that point the police were there

So what makes you think 'you' stopped him? Sounds like you just called the cops and told them where he was at.

Because I was a witness in court. He saw me once he was being carted off talking to the cops.

See to me, stopping the criminal would be if you tackled him to the ground or something along those lines. Not calling the cops and then going to court.

Vitani - October 16, 2021, 3:28 am

That's kind of suspicious. I would definitely watch my back if I were you. Don't wait until you see him either, if you see anything suspicious, report it. Also try not to put yourself in unnecessary danger.

xPower - October 16, 2021, 12:59 pm

Good job stopping him, I would watch your back if I were you

Cooligan - October 22, 2021, 1:23 pm

Yet another one of the absolute multitude of people who had their sentences overturned under the current administration.

A man in his late 30's was released about 2 months ago for a domestic assault charge against either his wife or girlfriend, forgot their exact relationship. But the point is around 2 weeks or 2 months after he was released he ended up murdering the same girlfriend/wife that the original assault charge stemmed from.

It's absolutely fucking ridiculous.

Bro the thing is with these drug addicts they are not shy to stab you if they get the chance. And also even whooping their ass is often not enough. I know one drug addict that has been taken to our neighbors countries forests countless time, ass whooped, stripped, everything, and he still didn't learn and hes still trying to get free drugs XD. These people are on another level man, stay safe.
