Thread: Shoppy.gg changed my crypto address to their own and stole my bitcoins!

xbryan - October 20, 2021, 7:59 am

Whenever you change a crypto address on shoppy.gg it requires an email confirmation from your email, but the crypto address on my shoppy.gg account was changed to a bitcoin segwit address without receiving any confirmation from my email. (so i didn't notice it for a while and lost $$$ bitcoins) my shoppy.gg account is not compromised so is my email.

in order to change an address they need to compromise those 2.

so the only explanation here is that the shoppy.gg's admin or someone with access to their backend changed it to their own bitcoin address that's why i didn't receive any email approval/confirmation for the change at all.

TLDR;

shoppy.gg changed the bitcoin address of my store to their OWN bitcoin address, i already lost $$ and would've lost even more if i didn't notice!!

Can anyone else recommend a similar service like shoppy.gg but doesn't screw over their own customers?

i don't know if this is the right section to post this, if not, please transfer if possible or tell me the right section, however this is the only place i think i can post this for now, i apologize if this is the wrong section..

I've used Sellix in past and it works good. Not sure about now. You can do some research or ask from guys who have their threads in "NFA Accounts" section grainy - October 20, 2021, 8:15 am

go with sellix and you wont have any problems

Koyote - October 20, 2021, 8:38 am

What was the address that the bitcoin was sent to?

Dopamine - October 20, 2021, 8:41 am

I'd suggest you Sellix. They recently added Nano and Monero to the other crypto available (BTC, LTC, ETH, BCH). The interface is so much better than Shoppy.

Juoku - October 20, 2021, 8:47 am

I'd suggest using sell.app, a website made by a member on HF, laso, sucks to hear what happened, it's never nice to get scammed

Is there anything that can be done to retrieve the funds back?

If it could be confirmed that the address belonged to the site, you'd have a case to approach their support with and demand a repayment, you'd just need to be sure it's theirs.

Yes I agree with you that will be a very good case if the address belongs to the site.

Unless some rogue admin put their own address in and then left, then they should have a good case I think, but we need to know the address to be sure.

Yes, i sent the information to their support. I'm waiting for a response for now..

Tor - October 20, 2021, 9:44 am

Sucks to hear I would have used sellix instead.

xPower - October 20, 2021, 9:56 am

Quite worrying to hear this especially considering a lot of people use the website. I'd be cautious moving forward with them.

Dorrance - October 20, 2021, 10:01 am

That's for real insane, yall better watch out.

LeetSpeed - October 20, 2021, 10:26 am

Damn that's insane, You should try using sellix I started using it a short while ago with no problems so far.

Prettykitty - October 20, 2021, 12:57 pm

Never heard of that site, sounds like many elaborate scams out there. I got all my crypto scammed recently too, can relate. Be careful.

Scoppa - October 20, 2021, 12:59 pm

Not the first time I hear something like this about Shoppy. As said previously by everyone, I'd recommend you Sellix. I never had issues like this with them.

Sorry for your loss tho.

Blazin - October 20, 2021, 1:03 pm

Are you sure they did it? There's many programs/extensions/viruses out there that can swap your bitcoin/crypto address out to another.

Have you been able to tie the address to any one entity yet?

Please keep up posted on what happens. I am curious.

Maxorg - October 21, 2021, 3:51 am

It's a dirty move for them to do that. You should try getting in contact with them to clarify that.

You can potentially expose an intrusion.

Geass - October 21, 2021, 3:53 am

I'm using shoppy.gg for almost a year and never had issues but it's not the first time I see threads like this one, maybe it's time to check for something else.

SourceCode101 - October 21, 2021, 3:58 am did you spoke with their support team?

Monero-chan - October 21, 2021, 10:29 pm

Damn that sucks to hear hopefully you can get your bitcoin back.

Nate - October 22, 2021, 12:32 am

Are they helping at all to resolve the issue?

Goku - October 22, 2021, 5:34 am

Maybe a good idea to give a heads up to your buyers and your selling thread.

KillSwitch? - October 22, 2021, 6:08 am

You could just have been a victim of a MITM or (Phishing 2.0). Attack. It is possible to use that technique to do this.

Java - October 22, 2021, 6:14 am

Dang that sucks.

I wonder if something else happened or if it was indeed the website abusing systems.

Aside from getting them to send the coins back to save face if they did it not really
