Thread: The Narrative for Q4 - Privacy & Interoperability?

Tando - October 25, 2021, 10:49 pm

I was discussing with my Telegram group generally about what projects will perform well in Q4.

I noticed that coins with the theme of privacy and or interoperability/bridging have done extremely well in the passed 90 days. I looked at everything that hadn't pumped yet, and I found SCRT at about $4.50 and mentioned it in the chat, without knowing it was mentioned here. It almost a 2x, and I got the price target pretty accurately.

Moving on, take a look at the most held crypto assets by institutions.

Most of the coins in that image have performed extremely well like NEAR, LUNA, STX, SKL, FIL, SOL etc.

I noticed KEEP was one of the most held cryptos among venture and hedge funds, and has recently retraced.

We know that 'whales' persons or institutions have the network/connections and funds to manipulate markets in their favor, and they do it constantly. Through media and through price action.

The problem with a public address is that, well, it's public. Your personal information may not be exposed, however your public address is, and it can be tracked for activity. Most people, especially the very wealthy, would rather not have any address linked to their financial activity for obvious reasons, so they opt for a more privacy centered blockchain.

See your yourself..

If this theme of privacy and interoperability continues, we can probably make a safe bet on SCRT, KEEP, DOT, ATOM to do really well. I also have my eye on MOVR, within the DOT ecosystem.

Just a thought. What do you guys think??

You can join my Telegram group if you want for some great calls, and very accurate technical analysis, I've literally been calling the best performing coins to the cent.

Cool post! For anyone interested, here's a link to the relevant Messari article from OPs screenshot: <https://messari.io/article/messari-fund-analysis-h1-21-examining-liquid-portfolios-of-crypto-funds>

Yea bridges are definitely a big part of the narrative in Q4. Whole lotta institutional adoption and a lot of news about bridges across the board, good for price.

Interesting to see your take on privacy coins. I don't know much about them at all and the only one I even recognise from the photo you posted is SCRT (cause Omni posted about it). I'm really keen to look into them.

They're all pretty low in market cap we can see a nice giga pump on them ?

What's your thoughts on Monero then?

How well do you think it will do in the future compares to the coins you've mentioned above?

Omniscient - October 26, 2021, 1:09 pm

I just don't know why exactly Monero isn't more loved. XMR imho is a $1k+ value coin today. It's disappointing to see it languish on the charts. But everything else Tando stated I basically agree with.

I agree with the two sectors you mentioned as well. I'm invested in Dot & scrt already previously for a little bit. DeFi will always have it's place too

I made a post on cspr, they've integrations in the works with other projects like Divi. Take a look at it- it's a friendly ghost ?

Exactly. It's mind-boggling to see shitcoins like Shibu to be placed above XMR in the marketcap.. laughable. Like seriously, it's currently #11 in the chart right now.. like wtf ?????

Ever since the DNM switched to XMR, I've been very positive about its future use in the crypto space. Currently #41 on CMC, but #1 in real world use cases. ?
