Thread: Wisdom Teeth

Anyone got any bad stories about wisdom teeth? I went to the dentist a few weeks ago with some tooth pain and they said I need ALL FOUR of them out. I'm not looking forward to it, as well as the amount of money it will cost.

Sigma - November 5, 2021, 4:40 pm

Yes, I had a cyst under my wisdom tooth so I was in extreme pain for two weeks after.

Did you just have one removed? Cyst? Wow, that sounds fucked.

Sigma - November 5, 2021, 4:42 pm

No two on bottom. It was, they dug so deep in my gum.

I've had no issues with my wisdom teeth, luckily for me lol I heard all sorts of stories from friends and such Unlucky man. I hope I don't have any bs like that.

Lol I doubt it mate, I've had all my wisdom teeth out when I was 18, it's been over 10 years now so... Lol

Sweet, that's good then. My plan is still to ignore the pain and see what happens.

Shouldn't be that bad but all 4, your gonna come out in way more pain then you think. First 2-4 days will be rough

Not looking forward to it at all. The top right one is really bad as well.

Had mine removed about a month ago. Put it off for years as i was terrified of the process and read countless horror stories.

Anyways, i went it, they put me under anesthesia, woke up groggy and they wheeled me out to the car. Experienced ZERO pain during the healing process, i am still shocked tbh. I Only ended up taking two ibuprofen the first day. The only annoying part is cleaning the holes after eating since they take months to fill up. You should be good @op!

Zexo - November 5, 2021, 5:48 pm

Got mine removed a few years ago. I got put to sleep for mine so it was nice lmao.

If I get it done, I'll definitely be going for that option.

Went home and the recovery kind of sucked but I also had Invisalign so I had to brush my teeth every time I ate. So that sucked.

How many days before you could eat properly?

The money aspect isn't too bad if you have good insurance. You're lucky to get them out all in one go, I had to go two separate times. My top ones grew in normally, my bottoms were deeply impacted. I was awake for my top ones as well, they numbed the area and pulled it out. The pain wasn't bad at all, you only feel pressure if you're awake during the procedure. A couple of nights of throbbing but that's normal. The worst part was not being able to smoke but I found a way to.

As for my impacted teeth, I was put to sleep and didn't feel anything. Took a few days to stop feeling pain and a couple of months for the holes to close and that goes for both my top/bottom. My advice to you is to remember to gargle saltwater at least three times daily for a week. You'll be completely fine after a week, just keep it clean.

Thanks for the advice man. I heard from a friend that if you get put to sleep, the recovery is worse but if you do it awake, you recover better/quicker. I dunno how that makes a difference though.

Kittenz4life - November 5, 2021, 6:28 pm

I had four impacted ones removed when I was 16. We opted for me to go under during the procedure because it would have been too much for me.

I didn't notice any difference and I absolutely hate going to the dentist but it must be done. If you're young with a good immune system, you'll recover slightly quicker than those who don't. It's nothing to worry about.

You guys are convincing me. I'm going to get it done soon, thanks.

I don't remember what happened after having my wisdom teeth pulled out. They drugged me the fuck up.

blackrose_x0x0 - November 10, 2021, 9:01 am

Hope it goes alright man. I had mine removed when I was a teenager and it was pretty painful the first days post surgery. Pro tip: Don't eat popcorn after getting your wisdom teeth removed... my stupid teenage self did that and wow talk about horrible pain haha

Grim - November 10, 2021, 9:35 am

Had all mine taken out paid 5 bands cas i didnt have insurance. Big Rip on my part there it didnt hurt at all though they gave me some good shit after as well.

Thats rough. I fortunately had mine covered, but took around a year for them to approve smh.

dam thats nice. To be fair mine were super deep so they had to graft bone as well after they took the teeth out.

i also need some implants soon as well now that are probably gonna cost alot as well :(

Edit: i dont really care that much about the cost just i hate people doing shit to my teeth and dont like dentists i think there profession along with cosmetic surgeons is kind of a scam. Dont get me wrong doctors and people in hospitals that save peoples lives are amazing but sometimes i think cosmetic doctors and dentists way overcharge for stuff and they get away with alot.

I've had mine out, but it went smoothly. I opted for the general anesthetic, but I've had friends do the local and said it was fine. Eating wasn't too fun for a few days after, but the pain killers they give you are nice and relaxing.

Rsynced - August 21, 2025, 7:12 am

I hate wisdom teeth, I should of got mine pulled. They destroyed my teeth and bite. My teeth are fucked to say the least... Gonna just get Dentures one day... hehe, I'm in my 40's.

Karwus - January 14, 2026, 10:37 am

They're so far away that often it's impossible to brush them well and then they can get infected and rot, damaging the whole system as teeth are connected to nerves. I heard cases of people who had hearth issues because of sick teeth.
