Thread: Have you ever had a Black Friday deal that was too good to be true?

I remembered a few years ago I got a laptop deal on BF with a 50% discount which seemed too good to be true...

Did you ever have a similar BF deal?

Nope. Then again the last thing I bought from BF was anime stuff...

I've never really had any luck with Black Friday to be honest

Black Friday tech tends to be cheap garbage no wanted to buy originally, specifically those sub $300 TVs that may be 50 in + but trash panels. It's okay those clowns will only go next BF to replace the last shit tier TV for another larger shit tier panel TV.

I bought a 65in TV for $229, and right after it was selling for $550.

Few years ago i grabbed a dell ultrasharp for $160, retail was around $350 at the time. should have bought a few more.

Black Friday is just over advertised bull shit. (At least in my country).

Most deals are items that cost the same as 2 months ago. And if you are lucky to find a good deal, you only save like 10%.

I didn't buy it, but I remember I saw some bikes that were usually at 240$ sold on BF for 35$

That how it is here. On black Friday, everything is a "good deal"...few weeks later you realize that you didn't save much ?

No I don't. Most of them aren't deals. They rise the price before the promo.. lul

Not really, Black Friday is usually pretty boring. Not a bad time to pick up a new TV tho.

Yes I went down to the Seattle premium outlet mall during black Friday, I got a under armor coat for 20 usd and a 300 dollar watch for 70 usd. This was about 2 years pre covid.

xDonDraper - November 9, 2021, 6:27 am

To be honest I never had a good deal on Black Friday but last year before Black Friday I succeeded to get a laptop for a very good deal, like -40%.

It was a steal still to this day.

The only thing that ever seems to be a deal on Black Friday is TVs, or maybe its just me?

That's pretty much it. Cell phones "kinda."
