

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: What instruments are you fond of? do you own the same>

Eminemicp - November 23, 2021, 12:13 am yWho owns many types of instruments? schools? i know colleges DO!

thats a answer that kind of can relate to a new idea being brought up now, Colleges and all they're endless funds to buy maintain and store musical devices, must have a giant reduction in courses fees that dont utilize them?

is it a big deal to know how to operate a musical instrument?

what are the most common basic band components?

youdigitalzdotcom - September 16, 2023, 10:06 pm

I am fond of playing the guitar and the piano. they make me feel really good musicially

Dw2005 - September 18, 2023, 6:22 am

Who Owns Many Types of Instruments?

Many institutions, including schools, colleges, and universities, own a variety of musical instruments, primarily for instructional and performance purposes.

Costs & Course Fees:

While colleges may own a large number of instruments, the cost of these instruments is just one component of course fees. Other expenses such as faculty salaries, infrastructure, and administrative costs play a significant role. Not every course fee would see a reduction just because musical instruments aren't utilized in that specific course.

Importance of Knowing an Instrument:

Learning to operate a musical instrument can be beneficial for cognitive development, discipline, creativity, and cultural appreciation. However, its importance varies depending on individual goals and career paths.

Basic Band Components:

Common basic band components include:

Rhythm Section: Drums, bass guitar, and keyboard/piano.

Melody/Lead: Lead guitar, lead vocals, and possibly wind instruments like saxophone or trumpet.

Harmony: Backup vocals, rhythm guitar, and possibly other wind or string instruments.

carnitas19879 - May 9, 2024, 10:29 pm

trumpet is the best(yes i do play the trumpet)