

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Community alert @simplicity!

moneyprinter - December 14, 2021, 1:17 am

Now first off before people come at me i know i should've used HF contract but i didn't think someone with high rating would scam for a measly $98.

i contacted @simplicity! on discord (Euot#8917)
to buy the his chat avenue bot

you can read the convo in the pictures but he hasn't messaged me since dec 5th saying that he can't send the bot at that time

if you look at his HF profile you can see he's scammed other people, i'm not saying i know he has but it looks like it. it seems like he weasels his way out of scams reports. it'd be funny if he came and weasled out of this one with his high reputation i don't know where he got from these scummy vendors should be banned even if it was over discord

also message me for screenshots i can't post links cos i don't have 50 posts

jcole - December 14, 2021, 1:21 am

No contract being initiated leaves you in a bad spot to dispute on the forums. Anything off site is at your own risk, but if you have legitimate evidence of something it is always good to see people get exposed for the negligent business they do.

Michael - December 14, 2021, 4:48 am

(Dec 14, 2021 02:21 AM)jcole Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) No contract being initiated leaves you in a bad spot to dispute on the forums. Anything off site is at your own risk, but if you have legitimate evidence of something it is always good to see people get exposed for the negligent business they do.

This + this isn't the sufficient categorie for these types of posts.

Your thread belongs here:

Marketplace Discussions

N - December 14, 2021, 5:29 am

You should always deal on site with a contract, regardless of anyones profile reputation and how reputable they may look.

webdev77 - December 14, 2021, 2:54 pm

Read. <https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=5953973>