Thread: Happy Christmas to me! My GF managed to crash my car...

Kanoplya - December 25, 2021, 7:10 pm

That's how it went for me, lol. I was drunk celebrating Christmas, my GF had to take her friend home so I let her use my car. Like 5 minutes later she called me crying like crazy and telling me that she crashed...

Came to her, made sure she is safe and tried to calm her down as much as possible & told her it's okay and that shit happens. She has her driving license for 2 months and roads are slippery, and she managed to hit the tree with the cars side. It's a Mercedes coupe, so it won't be cheap to fix it.

Loved that car a lot, and just typing this here to vent. Hope your Christmas was better than mine...

Damn, I was watching a video on youtube about amazon drivers driving in the thru the snow storms and they are turning the wheel crazy to try not slide.

Unlucky man, thats gonna cost a bag.

Oh crumbs, is she ok??

The main thing is that everybody is ok. And hey, once it's all calmed down, you can forever bring up that time she crashed your car in every argument, so it's not all doom and gloom. Happy christmas, hope your girlfriend has recovered from the shock and all that.

Haha, everyone is okay, thank you for taking care :D

And good point on bringing up it in the arguments, haha.

Happy christmas.

You let a GIRL with her license of 2 MONTHS drive your Mercedes Coupe in slippery cold winter weather...

You can't even be mad at her at that point bro lmfao

Sorry to hear about that though man, glad she's okay fr, I took my son and his mom back home Christmas evening and saw 10+ cops n ems on scene of a fatal motorcycle accident, I hate when I hear about that kind of stuff.

Hope your car is gonna be okay bro.

Bluffer - December 27, 2021, 3:47 pm

Don't you have insurance for this type of thing?

My girlfriend crashed my car while driving it and totaled it while we were on vacation. Luckily since we are both insured it was not much of a big deal. Good luck with this situation.

Hope your car is gonna be okay bro.Welp, yeah. I let her drive a lot during those 2 months, but it was with me all the time. Took her onto parking lots so she could feel how rear wheel drive car feels like, etc.

She was always extra careful and stuff and the Mercedes with all the electronic safety stuff. I knew it could happen, but was hoping that it wouldn't. Oh well.

At least now it's an excuse for not letting her drive any of my cars ever, lol. She gotta save the dough for her own car now.

Somewhat "lucky" that it wasn't a brand new car, so yeah. I wanted to sell it and buy something different and now I guess it's time, lol.

I sold the car to a local car mechanic already.

Damn, rough shit. Sorry to hear bro. Next time don't let her drive lol. Buy her a $1500 Honda Civic to learn on and get around with.

Lol, you knew that she isn't experienced, and the roads are terrible to drive on, and you still let her drive your Mercedes? Hope you learned your lesson.

You don't get experience unless you drive. Very expensive lesson, should have got her something cheap. But oh well.

damnnnn! Is there such insurance that covers that? if so, hopefully you have it :)

Good luck though.

True, and ye, that would be a nice solution.

I never let my girlfriend drive, she's been in 3 car crashes in her 8 years of driving, I drive like a maniac and have never had a ticket/accident.

Women drivers are all the same.

Sullied - December 28, 2021, 12:43 pm

The GF will have to compensate in one way or another after the trauma clears.

We are similar with you, did lots of stupid shit like driving 100+ MPH in 30 zone, drifting into every corner etc, and not a single accident while I was behind the wheel.
