Thread: Pope Francis tells couples with pets and no kids that they are selfish.

The Pact - January 5, 2022, 2:38 pm

Doesn't seem too concerned with the environment. Pope Francis chastises everyone who gives their love to pets instead of having children.

If anything people in the world who don't have children are doing it right, the cost for children these days is getting higher and higher, and if anything this planet has enough people living on it right now I remember when the whole planet had six billion people on it and it was going crazy about overpopulation, fast forward to now we are nearing eight billion. We don't need to find a way to chill.

Truth - January 5, 2022, 2:53 pm

Everyone alive benefited from their parents choosing to have kids. To not want to return the favor is selfish assuming you can have kids of course.

Would you have a kid knowing it would have a bad life? personally, I see no point having a child if you can't give it a good life, if you bring a child into the world because you can and can't facilitate it's growth, that's selfish, not having no kids even if you can have them.

If the kid continues to choose to live, then the kid clearly sees whatever life he has better than not being born at all.

Seriously, think of any excuse for not having kids, and imagine if your parents used it and you were never born.

No kids(assuming you can have kids) = selfish

Its either be a hypocrite or admit to being selfish.

Ayn Rand didn't have kids and admitted to being selfish, thats better than denying the Truth

If everybody thought like you did no one would have kids. I know people who are so dirt poor but yet they still have 3-4 kids, sure they may not have lot of things in the world to offer but they work their hardest to try and provide them what they can.

yeh coming from the head of an organization riddled with pedophiles no wonder he wants more kids

So.....if a person kills themselves, their parents were selfish? My mother killed herself, does that mean that her parents were selfish having her but she wasn't selfish having me, because I truck on? Not really following the logic here. Believing you shouldn't have been born isn't the same as actively committing suicide. Life isn't a job that you quit because the job description was inaccurate.

Not only that, but biological creatures are hardwired to try and survive. People are biased.

Also, there are millions of needy children in the world, isn't it more selfish to produce extra of them, rather than adopting one of the ones that already exists? Isn't it more selfish to think that you're so wonderful that you need to be replicated?

I'm not sure who asked the pope, though. Don't see him producing many babies.

Ayn Rand didn't have kids and admitted to being selfish, thats better than denying the Truth Exactly. People who can have kids and don't are either retarded, or selfish and/or morally bankrupt. Imagine ending a genetic line your ancestors carried for thousands of years just so you could fuckin' play more video games lmao.

Not sure what logic you used to get there, but okay ?.

Why the fuck should people in the first world stop having kids and adopt third world kids, whose irresponsible parents will probably inevitably continue the cycle. Their kids, their responsibility.

Not sure why irresponsible parents existing should prevent responsible parents for having their own children.

It is your duty as a member of a people and a mammalian species to pass down your genes. If you don't you're defective. The liberal propaganda of nihilism got to you. It had gotten to me when I was younger but now I see the light.

themselves). Doesn't make sense to me either:

"Duty as a member of a people"? What does that mean? I'll make my own decisions on whether or not to pass down my genes, thanks.

Well frankly the pope should zip it and stick with his underage boys and "give me money and you won't go to hell" scam.

Today marks the day that I have to disagree with you. I couldn't care less if humans disappear from Earth after I'm gone. I don't like children and I like being free. That said, if the desire is there in the future and I live somewhere men have equal family rights I'll reproduce in the future. If I want it. I have precisely zero duties to humanity or even my country, certainly not considering the way things are going. Hopefully my would-be children can appreciate my intentions of protecting them from it all.

The kid who kills himself is the mentally unwell/selfish one.

You do you, you'll be outbred and eventually conquered, as has happened for thousands of years.

In my opinion that's self suicide. I see the reasoning but we can never hope to solve the problems facing our civilization if we take that attitude en masse.

I used to feel the same way you do. However we truly need to do something about the birthrates in first world nations.

The rest of us who see reason will continue to flee the cities, moving to small towns and will have 3-8 children, who will be taught the skills necessary to survive a crumbling society.

Truth - January 6, 2022, 3:32 pm

I want everyone to look at this amazing thing called the mirror, Now, imagine existing and not paying that forward.

No one can deny empiricism, you can tell yourself stories, lies, what ifs, but the empiricism will still stare back at you with its truth.

Your lies, what ifs, stories wont show up in the mirror.

Whats worse than selfishness? Denying Truth.

I have a Lhasa Apso. She is blind and deaf. She was a hearing ear dog (deafness runs in my family), but she is definitely a pet too. But, you know, she is sort of my kid also. I don't have human kids. My dad was a massive drunk and this trait runs in the family. He had a bunch of kids he couldn't afford, which he somehow blamed my mom for before she died of cancer, which also runs in the family. I doubt God thinks I'm being selfish by not bringing someone into the world with the wonderful gift of inherited imperfection and sin. The Pope can cordially go fly a kite. Makes me want to hack every .va TLD I can find, this. But alas, I dedicated myself to only use my powers for good. Also, vengeance belongs to God. The Pope will get what is coming to him. I'm pretty sure God takes it very seriously when spiritual leaders tax their sheep with unnecessary rules and traditions that cannot be traced to anything He ever required from man in accomplishing His will.

You really don't think it's possible to destroy the environment no matter what? Because all the things to do with saving the environment are annoying right? So let's all disbelieve scientists about all the annoying things. Genius!
