Thread: Anyone else got "covid nose" after having had covid19?

Caliban - January 6, 2022, 8:57 am

I got the virus and was feeling shitty for 3-4 days.

Feeling 80-90% good now but my nose feels fucked up. Some things (especially spicy things) smell really fould and acid. My taste is normal tho.

I hope my "covid nose" is soon going to disappear, its weird. Anyone else had this problem?

And yes i have been vaccinated in September.

Unholy - January 6, 2022, 9:02 am

Pretty sure I've had Covid the last few days, and I've definitely not had that.

bk randy - January 6, 2022, 9:12 am

I've never had covid and I'm anti-vax anti-mask xP

Same with everyone in my family, my dad said he think he had it but sure as hell didn't get "tested".

It's fear mongering at it's finest.

I know someone who have this since January 2021 and didn't recovered yet.... I hope you'll get well soon.

Grim - January 6, 2022, 11:03 am

Nah I've had covid for like 4 days but my taste and smell are fine. (Aside from the regular taste loss from a cold).

Nostre - January 6, 2022, 11:04 am

Ever since I caught COVID back in Dec 2020, I haven't had my smell back 100%. It needs to be held up to my nose for me to smell it... if that even works.

LOUD - January 6, 2022, 11:11 am

Fortunately I did not experience this although my girlfriend did and she has been without her smell 100% back for about 7 months now.

I feel for her and you too

ChexmixKiller - January 6, 2022, 1:24 pm

I'm not vaccinated just had it pretty bad for 4 days, had a high fever and was very dizzy all through it, my Uncle is a heart surgeon and he recommended I try ivermectin and I only took 2 and all the symptoms disappeared and never came back. But about 3 days after having no symptoms I'm realizing almost nothing has the same smell or taste now. It sucks.

630 - January 6, 2022, 2:00 pm

I have not personally had this but a coworkers father of mine still has messed up taste and smell from the beginning of December and his father who had covid over a year ago has still cannot smell.

Joe - January 6, 2022, 3:20 pm

My taste and smell weren't affected when I had covid.

How do you guys get ivermectin so easily of course it's banned from anywhere I look online. And the reason is actually simply they are afraid people will overdose on it I suppose or maybe it's just never been an over the counter medicine but anyway it's impossible to get where I am I think.

Anyway I don't think I have ever had Covid except I was told I was in the pharmacy with someone with Covid for 25 minutes and then I had the occasional cough and one night had trouble breathing. I had a negative test only three days after I was supposed to have been in contact with them but I never had a second test. The night where I had trouble breathing was just weird and I was coughing but not anything like continuously.

I got a prescription for it, I'm not a big medicine guy but the covid fever had me dying but if you just ask your doctor or whatever I'm sure they would give you a prescription potentially. I can't believe it still isn't recommended for covid treatment because my entire family has tried it when they had covid and it does wonders.

Rionxee - January 6, 2022, 3:51 pm

Nah, I just couldn't taste or smell for a week. My senses are all back to normal now thankfully.

It's not approved in the country I'm in for Covid19. My doctor wouldn't be allowed to prescribe it if I got it. But I keep seeing people on HF claiming it cleared up their symptoms. So while I know it's been a political football it seems to be actually working for people.

I think it would be extremely, extremely hard to get here. I don't think it's a total conspiracy because I read the FDA ARE testing it for use they just haven't approved it so most first world countries won't legitimise it until it has full approval.

good for you, love to to hear it. I definitely and not gonna boost the numbers up and get "tested", hell no i'm not participating in their scam

Crippy - January 7, 2022, 5:43 am

I don't want covid, but at this rate everyones gonna get it in my city :(.

[$(5)$] - January 7, 2022, 8:54 am

I had this exact problem. Shit literally burned my nostrils and sinuses. Hated it grainy - January 8, 2022, 2:18 am took few days for everything to get back to normal but u just gotta give it time nothing else u can do

William Murderface - January 8, 2022, 9:02 am

Just got over covid. I have this weird thing were anyrthing with vinegar in it tastes absolutely foul and rancid. It sucks

I'm anti-covid vax too but to outright deny how dangerous it can be is beyond braindamaged and wanting to spread it to others who may not be as fortunate as you is also braindamaged.

I've had covid, got over it in literally 4-6 days and it barely affected me. But I watched it destroy my mum and it has permanently fucked my cousins smell/taste. Why would you WANT to give it to others. So stupid and VERY immature Imao.

Lol where did I ever say I was okay with it spreading or that it's good for other people to get it?

I think you're the one that's displaying braindead.

James_774 - January 8, 2022, 10:47 am

I have a family member who had covid around march last year, they have "Covid nose"

As far as I'm aware, they can barely smell anything and its been like that for about a year now. Must suck, hope it gets better eventually! ?

Crippy - January 8, 2022, 7:39 pm

Apparently omicron is weak af and you dont get symptons, if so its mild af. Hopefully you didnt get delta...

Vader - January 8, 2022, 11:49 pm

yea it had a distinct taste in the back of your nose/throat. its almost a nice smell but it reminds me of the taste you get when youre sick with a cold and you drink water, but nicer.
