Learn about market cap and then realize that it doesn't matter whether or not a coin has reached a dollar.

Don't try to chase 100x, you WILL fail.

And stop listening to randos shilling you their coin. Think for yourself.

While I agree with T0bi, I do want to mention I'm staking HEX currently.

I will not go into detail on HEX.

DYOR.

What is everyone's obsession with HEX lately? I dig into it and it's giving me red flag after red flag. Plus, I watched an interview with the creator Richard Heart. Mind you the interview was conducted by "Meet Kevin" who literally has no clue what he's talking about ever when it comes to crypto, but Richard Heart just comes off as a pompous douche bag.

Locking up your tokens for 8 years also? Then if you miss your withdrawal period, you start losing 1% of your staked assets per week... What the fuck?

I audibly laughed when I went on the hex website and saw this:

Who the fuck is "Richard Heart" and why is he stroking his own ego on the face of his coin's site.

HEX can NEVER be the next BTC.

His main argument from people who question him is just saying that he already has money, he has no need to rugpull people. Probably the most half assed argument ever.

I wish those luck who invested and staked. I'm staying far away from HEX. I don't see the value going up to where I'd want to lock in my coins for x years.

Also, how is it ranked #201 on CMC with a $38bn marketcap? Things just don't add up.

Have a look for yourself. <https://coinmarketcap.com/currencies/hex/>

Honestly, the guy itself doesn't bother me. He's not the greatest but idm. Over the last year I had an ROI of 3000%+ and I'm content with that.

Falsely self reporting your own market cap. Probably quite easy to do. Are you really surprised?
