

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Advice - My car is being held for ransom

phunted - January 8, 2022, 10:43 pm

I've just been kicked out of a property due to not meeting rent for the week, the property owner has advised me that I have three days to leave and the rent will not have to be paid because im getting kicked out.

I have a car that's still at the property that im wanting to get towed to my new property however he has blocked the car in so theres no possible way of getting to it. He's refusing to give my car back unless the rent is paid however again the manager said I do not need to pay.

I should mention that the house mate i was living with is my family (1st cousin) He's known for being an absolute cunt and the king of petty.

I want to get my car back and I also want to make his life living fucking hell.
What advice do you guys have?

The Pact - January 8, 2022, 11:18 pm

You can tell whatever authorities that he's holding your car. You can tell the council or your can tell police. You can bring the letter from the manager saying that you don't have to pay rent. There is a reddit sub called r/prettyrevenge if you really want to go that route.

phunted - January 8, 2022, 11:23 pm

(Jan 9, 2022 12:18 AM)The Pact Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) You can tell whatever authorities that he's holding your car. You can tell the council or your can tell police. You can bring the letter from the manager saying that you don't have to pay rent. There is a reddit sub called r/prettyrevenge if you really want to go that route.

Police have already been contacted. They've given me the typical "we can't do anything about it" He's aware of the letter/confirmation from the property owner and still doesn't care hence the reason for going down such a shitty route.

I don't like to do this but i feel at this point in time its completely necessary.

The Pact - January 9, 2022, 12:07 am

(Jan 9, 2022 12:23 AM)Violets Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Police have already been contacted. They've given me the typical "we can't do anything about it"

He's aware of the letter/confirmation from the property owner and still doesn't care hence the reason for going down such a shitty route.

I don't like to do this but i feel at this point in time its completely necessary.

What route are you intending to go down? Can you try a different police station? Talking to different police has worked for me sometimes when they've done that assholery to me on issues. Can you talk to the local council sometimes they will got talk to people doing things to make the neighbourhood unpleasant and I meant showing the letter to authorities if he starts saying "but he hasn't paid the rent."

Vibe - January 9, 2022, 12:16 am

Whst country? Doesn't seem legal for him to hold your car, what's blocking it?

Get car first then worry about revenge

The Pact - January 9, 2022, 1:13 am

(Jan 9, 2022 12:23 AM)Violets Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Police have already been contacted. They've given me the typical "we can't do anything about it"

He's aware of the letter/confirmation from the property owner and still doesn't care hence the reason for going down such a shitty route.

I don't like to do this but i feel at this point in time its completely necessary.

Yeah it's NOT legal and the police are full of it saying "there's nothing we can do" because it's THEFT of a vehicle. What was their reasoning about "there's nothing we can do"?

L1l DuRk - January 9, 2022, 1:15 am

(Jan 8, 2022 11:43 PM)Violets Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I've just been kicked out of a property due to not meeting rent for the week, the property owner has advised me that I have three days to leave and the rent will not have to be paid because im getting kicked out.

I have a car that's still at the property that im wanting to get towed to my new property however he has blocked the car in so theres no possible way of getting to it. He's refusing to give my car back unless the rent is paid however again the manager said I do not need to pay.

I should mention that the house mate i was living with is my family (1st cousin) He's known for being an absolute cunt and the king of petty.

I want to get my car back and I also want to make his life living fucking hell.

What advice do you guys have?

Fbi is your best shot my man.

phunted - January 9, 2022, 1:17 am

(Jan 9, 2022 02:13 AM)The Pact Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Yeah it's NOT legal and the police are full of it saying "there's nothing we can do" because it's THEFT of a vehicle. What was their reasoning about "there's nothing we can do"?

The car is currently unregistered.

The Pact - January 9, 2022, 1:21 am

(Jan 9, 2022 02:15 AM)Tsu Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Fbi is your best shot my man.

lol FBI even the local police won't help because he didn't register his car so there's not current record that it's even his I guess.

phunted - January 9, 2022, 1:29 am

(Jan 9, 2022 02:21 AM)The Pact Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) lol FBI even the local police won't help because he didn't register his car so there's not current record that it's even his I guess.

Miscommunication. The car has been registered for 35 years. It's currently not registered.

We register our cars every 6, 1, 3 or 5 years at a time.

Charger - January 9, 2022, 1:31 am

(Jan 9, 2022 02:13 AM)The Pact Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Yeah it's NOT legal and the police are full of it saying "there's nothing we can do" because it's THEFT of a vehicle. What was their reasoning about "there's nothing we can do"?

In the US this is a civil matter. It's not theft of a vehicle. This incident is occurring on private property which means the police can't tow it.

(Jan 9, 2022 02:15 AM)Tsu Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Fbi is your best shot my man.

Lol no

phunted - January 9, 2022, 1:34 am

(Jan 9, 2022 02:31 AM)Charger Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) In the US this is a civil matter. It's not theft of a vehicle. This incident is occurring on private property which means the police can't tow it.

Lol no

Here in Australia its the exact same, civil and no chance of it being towed by authorities.

Charger - January 9, 2022, 1:36 am

(Jan 9, 2022 02:34 AM)Violets Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Here in Australia its the exact same, civil and no chance of it being towed by authorities.

My advise would be to contact an attorney.

Crippy - January 9, 2022, 1:45 am

sounds like extortion sir

just register ur vehicle? only 1.4k/year or pay for 3 months.

jmark7 - January 9, 2022, 2:56 am

Why cant you just register your car and then file a case of car theft. in this way you will get you revenge and also your Car.

Dont forget to get the letter from manager of no requirement to pay rent.

The Pact - January 9, 2022, 3:01 am

(Jan 9, 2022 02:31 AM)Charger Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) In the US this is a civil matter. It's not theft of a vehicle. This incident is occurring on private property which means the police can't tow it.

So when a burglar steals your laptop and it's on his private property it's not theft and is a civil matter? Bullshit!

GamesModder - January 9, 2022, 7:06 am

What does he have it blocked in with? If it's another car maybe get a friend that has a truck to move it then you can get your car, If it's some sort of barricade tear it up.

(Jan 9, 2022 04:01 AM)The Pact Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) So when a burglar steals your laptop and it's on his private property it's not theft and is a civil matter? Bullshit!

Sad to say it's leaning that way in N.Y. City. Did you hear that you can commit Armed Robbery there and it still be a misdemeanor as long as no one got hurt ???. Simply cause they don't wanna lock folks up due to the Big C there.

Charger - January 9, 2022, 2:56 pm

(Jan 9, 2022 04:01 AM)The Pact Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) So when a burglar steals your laptop and it's on his private property it's not theft and is a civil matter? Bullshit!

Theft is a crime. Breaking in is a crime. You're comparing apples to oranges.

The Pact - January 9, 2022, 3:08 pm

(Jan 9, 2022 03:56 PM)Charger Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Theft is a crime. Breaking in is a crime. You're comparing apples to oranges.

The landlord has stolen the man's car. Taking something that is not yours and refusing to give it back is theft. But apparently the HF member doesn't have it registered any longer, so there isn't proof it is his. That's why the police are refusing to treat it as theft. I don't see how it is a civil matter, although the police love to pretend things are a civil matter, so they don't have to bother with them.

(Jan 9, 2022 08:06 AM)GamesModder Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) What does he have it blocked in with? If it's another car maybe get a friend that has a truck to move it then you can get your car, If it's some sort of barricade tear it up.

Sad to say it's leaning that way in N.Y. City. Did you hear that you can commit Armed Robbery there and it still be a misdemeanor as long as no one got hurt ?? . Simply cause they don't wanna lock folks up due to the Big C there.

What is "the Big C"? They don't want to spend the money on policing and court cases etc....I imagine. Has crime become worse after lockdowns? It has here I guess.

Charger - January 9, 2022, 3:11 pm

(Jan 9, 2022 04:08 PM)The Pact Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) The landlord has stolen the man's car. Taking something that is not yours and refusing to give it back is theft. But apparently the HF member doesn't have it registered any longer, so there isn't proof it is his. That's why the police are refusing to treat it as theft. I don't see how it is a civil matter, although the police love to pretend things are a civil matter, so they don't have to bother with them.

He did not steal it. He is just being an ass and blocking it in. That's not theft. Just because something sucks doesn't mean it's a police matter.

The Pact - January 9, 2022, 3:25 pm

(Jan 9, 2022 04:11 PM)Charger Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) He did not steal it. He is just being an ass and blocking it in. That's not theft. Just because something sucks doesn't mean it's a police matter.

He is keeping something from the owner that doesn't belong to him. How are you pretending that's not stealing. Are you a cop worried about police time? Anyway your precious police time has been saved because the owner didn't register it so it's not his. That's why the cops can easily dismiss it. If he had paid the money to register it properly seems like the cops would have to come up with some other excuse for not dealing with the theft. You will have to explain to me more how theft of a car is a civil matter. He is keeping it on his property. If the owner of the car has not left the property I guess you are saying that it is an argument between people on the property. So when the owner moves out and is not on the property but unable to get his car, is that when it is no longer a civil matter? Is that what you are saying?

I mean over in California even the theft of candles by one flat mate by another flatmate was taken seriously enough that the police were investigating it but you say refusing access to someone's car on a property is civil in his state?

<https://www.mercurynews.com/2014/05/30/santa-barbara-rampage-san-jose-victim-posthumously-claimed-of-candle-theft/>

phunted - January 9, 2022, 6:29 pm

(Jan 9, 2022 04:25 PM)The Pact Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) He is keeping something from the owner that doesn't belong to him. How are you pretending that's not stealing. Are you a cop worried about police time? Anyway your precious police time has been saved because the owner didn't register it so it's not his. That's why the cops can easily dismiss it. If he had paid the money to register it properly seems like the cops would have to come up with some other excuse for not dealing with the theft. You will have to explain to me more how theft of a car is a civil matter. He is keeping it on his property. If the owner of the car has not left the property I guess you are saying that it is an argument between people on the property. So when the owner moves out and is not on the property but unable to get his car, is that when it is no longer a civil matter? Is that what you are saying?

I mean over in California even the theft of candles by one flat mate by another flatmate was taken seriously enough that the police were investigating it but you say refusing access to someone's car on a property is civil in his state?

<https://www.mercurynews.com/2014/05/30/santa-barbara-rampage-san-jose-victim-posthumously-claimed-of-candle-theft/>

I understand where you're coming from but clearly its different in other countries.

What you're saying doesn't apply where I am. Charger made all the right points.

(Jan 9, 2022 04:11 PM)Charger Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) He did not steal it. He is just being an ass and blocking it in. That's not theft. Just because something sucks doesn't mean it's a police matter. This is exactly it.

The hassle has been sorted, i took matters into my own hands and used violence. I wasn't on his property and there wasn't any evidence of me beating him up.

I went to the house, put the truck blocking the vehicle into neutral and let the bastard roll back down the driveway.

Organised a tow truck and now its safely at mine.

Case closed, thank you for the advice.