Thread: Alabama man accused of keeping meth-fueled 'attack squirrel' faces new charges

Quote:The trial of an Alabama man accused by police of keeping an "attack squirrel" that he made more aggressive by giving it methamphetamine has been delayed as he faces new charges, local media reported.

Mickey Paulk was arrested in 2019 after authorities received a tip about the allegedly drugged squirrel. Aside from the rodent, police found body armor and meth.

What a world we live in where we can't even keep meth squirrel's in our own homes. Whatever happened to being a free country? ?

Still among the least fucked up things human's have done tbh. Glad someone reported it though.

Its wacky out there... I used to know this kid who used to feed his dog with marijuana infused dog food.

I doubt it is actually true. It is only an accusation anyways. Crazy one at that.

There seems to be zero evidence the man actually did it so don't worry.

Are we really surprised by this Americans? This is one of the most tamer things an Alabamian has done in recent years. We actually should be quite proud of them.

This is actually normal. They make dog food and dog treats with CBD in them to help with joint pain, or any number of ailments. I used to work in a place that sold them.

It seems more like something Florida Man would do.

You know, it's awful, the intentional mistreatment of animals, but having lived in a place where you regularly run them over, I've become desensitized to what happens to squirrels and raccoons.

However, I went to school with a kid who bragged about his uncle throwing kittens off of grain silos and I wanted to fight him.
