Thread: How do you respond to compliments?

Eran - February 5, 2022, 1:32 pm

Do you give them a simple thank you, do you disagree with them, do you just smile? I know some people who aren't comfortable with responding to compliments so they just act awkward and change the subject. What about you?

Odd Squad - February 5, 2022, 1:39 pm

That's funny I was just talking about this earlier. Usually I do a awkward laugh and just say thanks.

Yuno - February 5, 2022, 1:46 pm

I am not comfortable with compliments, although I seem to get them often enough I just find it awkward lol

Maybe it depends on my feelings towards whoever is giving the compliment.

MavenGradle - February 5, 2022, 1:58 pm

Broad question. I guess it depends on the person and the underlying motives (if applicable) and the compliment itself and the situation.

trishtiwni - February 5, 2022, 2:02 pm

just show a simple smile and say thanks

Luffy-_- - February 5, 2022, 2:06 pm

Probably say thank you, the smile depends of the person :)

The - February 5, 2022, 2:17 pm

I smile and casually say, "Aww, well thank you."

hackerm0m - February 5, 2022, 3:17 pm

If it's online, I usually respond with a thank you or if it's over the top I don't even respond. People comment on my FB pictures and say some foul stuff, I'll just like it and not comment back. Simply for the fact I don't want to be completely rude.

In person, oh god I am so uncomfortable and don't know how to receive them. I think with losing weight I'll become more comfortable (possibly). Someone complimented me last week in person and I just said "shut up." Hahaha

The reason I'm not comfortable with compliments is because I don't receive them that often, so when I do it feels a bit sus to me lol.

Yeah, there can definitely be something evil underneath the compliment depending on the person giving it.

Yeah comments under pictures are kinda giving me the 2012 vibes where a girl would get the same comment from 20 different friends :P

You're on a weight loss journey? It's nice when you work hard on your body and someone compliments you right??

It's the guys that are weird. They girls for sure comment same thing on everyone's pics. One dude recently wrote something like "I'd let you piss on me, just let me know" along those lines. My mom commented on it, funny but embarrassing lol. I suspect the person was trying to be funny but I was like broooooooooo that's not it.

Yeah, it's new but on the way. It totally is, makes it worth it. I've lost weight before and those compliments I would bask in— awkwardly of course.

I felt that. I'm not used to getting them either so I always side eye wondering if it's genuine or a backhanded compliment of some sort. Gotta get out that way of thinking though.

hackcaffe - February 5, 2022, 4:39 pm

The way we receive compliments depends on the way we treat ourselves. However, the way we react to praise mostly reflects our understanding of ourselves, our inner perception of how our parents and other important people saw us when we were little, as well as our opinion of how others perceive us. The essence, in fact, is that the way we receive compliments, apart from the essence of the compliment itself, also depends on the way we treat ourselves. Our subjective attitude towards everything good, beautiful, smart, honest and creative in ourselves depends on whether our parents' attitude towards us was authentic and warm, how they set limits for us, and how much and how they met our needs.

Therefore I react to the compliment naturally and be grateful for it because in my subconscious I know that it distinguishes my personality and my relationship with others

Recon72 - February 5, 2022, 4:40 pm

Depends on the sincerity / level of the compliment.

If they are really kind and genuine I'll thank them genuinely and potentially reciprocate.

Yeah I'm literally overthinking every compliment, it's not healthy :(

Same as me then. But sometimes I think it's not healthy to not trust most of the compliments I get.

if someone tell me "get congrats on getting 9 CGPA" ,i just tell them that congrats to you too , you did your best

Do you tell the waiter "thanks, you too" when he says enjoy ur food? ?

Juoku - February 6, 2022, 5:59 am

It depends who gives me the compliment, but 99% of the time I'll make some kind of joke about it, thank the person and be done with it, I don't mind compliments but sometimes its awkward (Feb 6, 2022 06:54 AM)Eran Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Do you tell the waiter "thanks, you too" when he says enjoy ur food? ?

i mean when he says enjoy your food? hes asking for the review of the food he (and his team) served so ill just reply with "yes it was great" or "no i felt it was a little too spicy for my taste buds" ,with a smile and politely

if he tells "enjoy your food!" then yes i would simply smile and say thank you (since he cant enjoy the same food so i wont say you too)

if at the end he says "have a great day ahead" while leaving then yes ill say "thanks, you too"

Smexy - February 6, 2022, 6:21 am

If I get compliment IRL I just return it with a different kind of compliment. :)

Loukas - February 6, 2022, 6:41 am

Really depends on the person, but usually just a smile and thanks. Maybe also I compliment back if I feel necessary.
