Ok we see that putin doesn't give a shit about anyone and he is proving a point here, i doubt anyone will interfere in this war.

Where do u see the market going, BTC to 11k?

And what are the major effects of this war to the crypto market?

Let's see what happens around 30k first before we start aiming for 11k.

And when nothing happens China will go to Taiwan next!

Lets see if putin also has the balls to mess with NATO as well, he won't be that stupid i'm sure.

What worries me a lot though is that china seems to be parting with russia, that is very dangerous.

I don't like how the president of ukraine wants his civilians to fight for him though, ukraine is clearly no match for russia, he should advice them to seek safety in europe instead.

Hopefully this ends soon with not too many more casualties.

One asshole dictator teaming up with another. No surprise there. This is the whole point of NATO; countries that want peace and democracy teaming up to force communists back.

We thought the viet cong and Taliban were no match for us and look what happened. Ukraine will use gorilla warfare, kill as many Russians as you can and make it a deadly and expensive war for Russia.

Russia's military stands at around 1.5 million armed force personnel – five times greater than that of Ukraine which has 311,000 armed personnel, according to 2019 data from the International Institute for Strategic Studies and published by The World Bank.

When factoring in NATO, which consists of the armed forces from 29 countries, the Russian army is dwarfed as NATO has nearly 3.5 million armed force personnel.

The US spent $778 billion US dollars (USD) on military expenditure in 2020 (not counting in the other 28 countries) – 13 times greater than the $62 billion spent by Russia during the same period, according to Stockholm International Peace Research Institute (SIPRI) data published by The World Bank.

Also keep in mind russia is getting crippled on finances and armed force personnel, weapons, vehicals, airplanes etc.. now even more.

Russia can't even be compared to NATO.

Exactly, take out nuclear weapons and Russia and China gets destroyed. Russia sounds suicidal honestly, the fact Putin is crying and threatening nuclear was because he so badly want's to reinstate the shit system that is known as the soviet union.

Russia is commonly called a gas station disguised as a country and it's so true. We should ban all russian gas and oil and sanction the hell out of them, watch their economy crumble Honestly I hope this war just gets too bloody for Russia and eventually they turn back but I think it will get worse, I don't think Russia will stop with just Ukraine. I'm sure with a trillion dollars spent on defense in the US alone that we have plans for a nuclear war and could rebuild and survive if this happened but hopefully it doesn't come to that.

If china parts with Russia against the NATO, that would be a different story sadly, numbers are pretty much equal then however as someone in my community brought up, china wouldn't be as short minded as Putin is in regards of the economic effects to go to war with NATO in any way, financial wise it would be much wiser for China to either remain on the fence or back NATO up, so far they seem to be on the fence luckily and they should stay there whatever happens then russia stand no chance period.

In terms of nuclear weapons, russia is equal if not winning according to Public released statistics yes compared to NATO, doesn't mean they can use them as you would think if they get stormed by NATO and at that point probably china as well.

Nuclear weapons coming 5+ sides out of the world.. nahh russia would still lose hard im sure. But yeah at that point it's WW3 lets just not go there.

I think Putin is angry and unstable. China is all about the long and patient game and I think they would back down if they felt they were going to be pulled into a global war.

I really don't see how this ends without a global war though and I think they know now is the best time because of the failed leadership we have in office right now.

I agree, at this point it's just hoping that putin wins from ukraine ASAP with as little civilian casulties as possible and then it's time for an economic war which will most likely end in putin stepping down and getting prosecuted or getting assassinated.

I'm not a military strategist but you'd think we would have a way of taking out Russia's nuclear weapons before they had a chance to launch; factor that in with a way of targeting nuclear missiles mid flight and blowing them up. Israel did an operation where they hacked into radar systems and made it look like they weren't even there, why couldn't this be done to target nuclear sights. Surly the most powerful military and economy in the world has an Ace up their sleeve.

I just really don't think it's as straight forward as "they have this many and we have this many". I think it's about who is most prepared and who has the best strategy.

No definitely not that straight forward i'm sure which was my point indeed i just lack the military strategist knowledge to properly formulate that.

Let's see how it behaves on the next leg down, I think as long as we hold 33k support we could still consider a reversal.

Considering Putin has made the president of Ukraine the number one target and his family the second target, Putin deserves no less then a public hanging.

Hopefully this isn't what triggers WW3, Europe sure does have a history of wars spiraling out of control.

Well if the NATO and big nations don't stop Russia Soon, I think China will see this " They didn't use anything to Russia, we'll invad Taiwan too and nothing will happen to us" Also China's Economy is far more important to the word then Russia's Oil.

Only China claims this, and if Taiwan gets hit, the world if ducked we already have chips shortage, imagine the biggest chip making factory in the world gets hit, everything will be more expensive and electronics will sky rocket in prices and u'll be lucky if u find them.

When war, politics, and crypto are linked...I think it's a good thing that is happening. Crypto is important enough that global changes are considered.

I'm bullish on crypto during times of war because of that. For what reason would crypto be used less or lose value during war?

Example is what happens RU wins and UA government collapses? Do you think RU will respect the Ukrainian Hryvnia (UA Money)? Or will it get trashed for the RU Ruble? It certainly is going to have a hard time maintaining value even if exchanged into rubles. Most likely people will push their wealth into crypto for easy transportation and securing.

Just like the crisis in Greece and then Venezuela, Bitcoin was a savior to many.

Couldn't have said it better myself.

As far as the (ineveidable) drop of crypto/stocks go. I'm surprised to see crypto still doing so well right now. I was expecting much worse already. I'm not saying this is over. But I was expecting to see it hanging around 33-34k a lot longer. Where as right now we are up to 39k. with ETH graph staying in mirror.

Omniscient - February 25, 2022, 12:13 pm

One thing to note some people want the conflict to end fast. I get that but realize that means you want Russia to win and for Ukraine government to fall or at least bow to Russian dominance. I don't see any other path to a quick resolution.

And as some said, this could inspire China to take Taiwan. I think many of us realize the serious implications to that move.
