Thread: Any service that allows accepting paypal payments, without exposing my paypal ?

xviiiirus - February 25, 2022, 6:40 am

I'm looking for a service that allows accepting or creating a shop that accepts Paypal as service, and probably cryptocurrency, but wouldn't ask me to connect my paypal, I want it to receive payments from customers, and then payouts would be handled internally, any idea ?

Have you ever heard about Sellix, Shoppy?

You'll be able to receive crypto and not link your PP.

Yes i know about them, mainly i want to receive Paypal, those services require connecting to my paypal, and any payments are sent to my paypal directly from customerd.

You'll want to look into a Merchant of Record for this, like Paddle.

Paypal holding isn't allowed. This is basically what you are asking for. Save yourself the trouble and just don't use paypal.

This x1000

Paypal is a fucking freakshow, trust me, they will close you down at one point.

We had a paypal for our LEGITIMATE business, got closed down with 28k euro on it, they have been holding it every since (3 years ago now), even tho they say you can reclaim it after 180 days. They aren't responding anymore, i can't call them, they don't give a fuck and they are filthy thieves.

Never bother with PP, it's a shame they are so big but fuck Paypal in each and every way.

Technically not. I was using a service that did this for years.

I don't know if they still do it. I was taking credit cards and Paypal through their account and once a month they would pay me out. Fee was higher but it wasn't my own PP account and they dealt with fraud better.

I think 2checkout requires you to link your own Paypal.

I was booted from the service after using it for maybe 6+ years. Then I used my own Paypal account and after another few years they booted my account I had opened in the 90's.

You can find legitimate services that do this. I gave you one, good luck finding more. I won't bother anymore since crypto is king. No one is ever going to be able to disrupt by income again by closing a monopoly account (Paypal).
