Unspecifically, I live in the low desert, which means during the summer it can get up to 120F (49C) degrees for several days in a row and 100F (38C) degrees at night. There's little to no respite during the summer and when the rainy season starts it gets humid. Which is why I like winter, the high for winter is usually only 80F (27C), at most 90F (32C). I also grew up in the midwest USA so I'm just used to the cold.

But the whole "we'll be seeing more of it" was a joke about nuclear holocaust.

Mainly skiing (both alpine and XC) and snowboarding. I've also recently got into ice skating after watching the 2022 Winter Olympics. Stepped onto the ice for the first-time last week since I was a kid. It was fun but I fell a lot lol

I'd say I'm pretty decent with downhill skiing being my strongest of the bunch although I'd like to get better at XC skiing and attempt a Biathlon. When I was younger, I was really into halfpipe snowboarding and was basically going to the mountain every weekend with a group of friends. Good times.

Oh dude, going through an ice cave sounds awesome, I've never done it. I'd love to do that.

I'm sorry to hear that bro. I hope you still get on the board every now and then just for the enjoyment of it even if you can't perform to the level you used to.

I can relate. A car ran over my foot about 8 years ago and I thought I'd never be able to snowboard, ski, run, etc... ever again. Because of the injury I'll probably never get to the level I used to be at but it has opened up my mind to other things like Biathlon events.

-45?!?! I'm asuming you're talking celcius.

That's INSANE.

Where i'm at it doesn't reach those numbers however some other places here can reach those numbers or even higher.

Always been a winter person.

The way I see it, if its extreme heat its almost impossible to cool down sometimes and carry on with your day.

Whereas in extreme cold, you can always add more and more and more layers and pay for more heating till you're good

Winter all the way! I really hate summer because in winter if I wanted to be warm I can just put some blanket on and that's it. But, in summer you cannot do that and the house is very very hot too.

I used to enjoy the summer more when I was younger, but now the winter. Longer nights is great.

It only gets dark for like 4-5 hours here just now it's hard to get to sleep if I stay up too late. It's not like we get the best weather here in the summer either so there's that too.

Raymond Reddington - June 15, 2022, 11:04 pm

Winter. The brisk air, serene calm of the morning after a night of snow fall, and the warmth of a cup of tea in my hand. The layers of clothes and the comfort of someone else's warmth. What's not to absolutely love about it?

Summer 100%. Between Having the jetskis, boat, and us possibly adding a side by side soon for the dunes for next year (If the old lady allows it lol). I definitely do not have near as much fun in the winter.

Had a snowmobile years ago before I bought my truck. But I just didn't enjoy it much. It never snowed enough here to justify having it. And I didn't have enough friends that had Snow toys to justify traveling to use it. All in all summer guy for sure. So is our entire family lol.

I have a front wheel drive car with plenty of torque and power, I know how to control a car very well (if I do say so myself) I also have good breaks and know how to emergency break using the engine if the wheels just skid.

You drift out of a corner normally and cops see, you're getting pulled over, during the winter icy months, you're not getting pulled over for skidding out a little.

I also like the smell after it rains and the vibe

Slyboo.ts - October 27, 2022, 2:07 pm

Well, I am living in the northern hemisphere and winter is coming. I am more of an autumn and winter guy, as it is nice and cold, there are no pesky mosquitoes flying around, there is skiing and winter activities, and it is nice and refreshing. The vernal season and summer are too hot for me, there are mud puddles everywhere, and I don't like the overly sunny days.

Cooligan - October 27, 2022, 2:08 pm

I honestly like both, being where I'm from it's hard for me to decide since we have season cycles.

I really like Spring tbh, that time of year right after winter when everything starts to warm up, smell awesome, and look pretty.

There are some rare occasions I hated the winter.

The military for instance, they'd make you wear not nearly enough clothes for the temperature / activity outside.

Before living here, I lived in an area with only one season. So I lived my whole life thinking I loved winter and snow. Now that I've lived through all 4 seasons properly multiple times, I know that fall is my favorite season. But if I had to choose between winter and summer HERE, I'll take winter. Although I absolute hate ice and -30 degree weather, I hate aggressive bees and 110 degree weather more.

DemonAsylum - April 30, 2024, 11:24 pm

Ehhh summer is more ideal for how it looks outside and going out to do things. I prefer the cold though. If it's not crazy hot / humid than summer. I think I'd be able to better answer this if it was based on a certain location and that I knew how summer / winter was there usually.

Mooooookie - April 30, 2024, 11:36 pm

I will gladly take Spring/Summer over Winter any day, as I live where it gets COLD... and mhm, its no fun shoveling snow, and it's possible to get more done during the warm weather, whereas in the Winter, certain activities are limited.

Absence - April 30, 2024, 11:43 pm

Honestly I hate the cold. I despise the cold. But it can be so fun, if you are okay with gearing up. Snow can be such a great element to have fun in, and I am looking forward to trying my hand at winter sports.

So you enjoy playing in snow, but you hate the temperature that comes with it haha? That's unfortunate. I quite like the cold and the snow. Depending on how bad it gets though, it can make for dangerous conditions as well as a lot of work around the house.

Yeah that is the other downfall to me, it is not an ideal work season for me. And a lot more risk. I feel I have horrible luck with ice.

100%. While snow can be really nice, it can also cause a lot of issues if it comes in large amounts, with rain, freezing cold temps, etc. Not exactly ideal.

Not sure I lean definitively one way or the other while just generally speaking ?

If it's the summer and winter that I've been most used to in my life living in the various places I have, than I'd probably go summer. I am more of a cold person, but it's much nicer outside, much easier to go do things, and more things to do when it comes to summer.

Since your bumping old threads, Im gunna give my 2cents.

Honestly when its summer time I want winter and when its Winter time i want summer! I like 60 degree weather, however I admire the cold and the extreme heats that we have here in the Midwest. I love my outdoor adventures and being outdoors puts me at peace. However to much of anything bothers me so I love the changing of seasons more then most.

i prefer winter over summer because when its over 100 degrees with 80% humidity, there's only so much clothes you can take off because your sweating profusively.

I prefer Summer. I absolutely hate being cold, although I do like being nice and cozy at home during the winter. But doing anything outside during winter is dreadful for me. My face hurts when its too cold. I'm in Texas for reference and even tho it doesn't get as cold as other places, my body shuts down lol.

I know exactly what you mean, and share a similar mindset. I'm always looking forward to one season, and then soon become tired of it, or begin looking forward to another. The perfect temperature for me is between 60-70 degrees.

There are so many: girls, good weather, beaches, muay thai, food... I tried other SE Asian countries like Vietnam, Cambodia, Philippines, and while they are nice for short holidays, they don't have Thailand's infrastructure for longterm living.

In fact my plan is to move there permanently, and only visit Europe 1 month per year max to see family and friends.

Okay, that's what I've always heard. From what I seen, I'd love to visit some day. Everything you listed off seems to persuade me even more to make that journey, much sooner. I think it would be awesome to train Muay Thai in Thailand. I'm sure it's a much different experience, especially being exposed to the culture as well.
