It's a Souls game with George RR Martin's help. Big emphasis on good plot. You get what you expect from a Souls game, except with a little extra razzle-dazzle like mounted combat. If you've played Monster Hunter on the PSP 15 years ago or Dark Souls/II you'd probably not get frustrated. Also, expect hidden easter eggs like Borat's "dog", Frozen's Elsa references, and Game of Thrones items that you otherwise wouldn't have noticed until you took the time to examine your surroundings.

Here's a comical trailer on the Elden Ring plot made by Thailanders:

Cheers!

I haven't played it yet because I wait for games to come down in price usually.

I can't wait to play it though, I've been watching streamers and it looks fun (and annoying) af

Smart, I might do this too. Unless the game looks absolutely outstanding.

That's how I feel about the new Harry Potter game, it's $70 on release and I'm probably gonna pay it. Normally I wouldn't for most games but I don't wanna wait for it.

Lookin to secure a PS5 in few months first then I'll give this game a go. Definitely game of the year material from all the gameplay I've seen so far.

Oh my god that game looks like a terrible waste of $70. Holy shit. Harry Potter isn't even in it!

$70? That's garbage.

Yeah but it's open world and looks amazing! Plus I can try to relive my childhood an impossible task I know BUT I CAN TRY!

Lol alright but I'd take your own advice and wait like a week when that game drops to like $20.

It'll definitely drop in price sooner than Elden Ring.

My thoughts exactly.

I feel like that game will be a huge flop, but we'll wait and see.

Even after watching the trailer, I still don't like the game itself. Maybe because I never liked the movie-themed games
