Thread: Work From Home

NurSpec - March 10, 2022, 10:26 pm

Anyone currently in a work from home job? I am trying to get out of the daily grind of a 6am-4pm hands on job, desperately trying to find something that would allow me to work from home/on my computer etc.

Mizari - March 10, 2022, 11:16 pm

You can be a customer service rep for a lot of tech companies. I know of a few that source work from apple, Microsoft, etc.

bk randy - March 11, 2022, 12:05 am

Sure, I can hook you up with an at-home job... but it will be at my home, and you will be my slave.

Let me know if interested, great benefits.

Is sex included or na. If there's none I'm not interested!

One tip, search for this on Google, and you'll find lots of spreadsheets:
"remote jobs from home site:docs.google.com/spreadsheets"

Some examples:

<https://docs.google.com/spreadsheets/d/1TLJSINxCbwRNxy14Toe1PYwbCTY7h0CNHeer9J0VRzE/edit>

https://docs.google.com/spreadsheets/d/14PLmzxK3cq1pVy0ahVKO_InJLTSErKnq83pDbRh_P8o/edit#gid=0

Good luck.

There are plenty of things you can do to find a remote job, one of them is exactly what Michael suggested.

You can also join LinkedIn and search for a remote job there, a lot of companies are recruiting there.

Also I think I saw a member here on HF with a website or platform they made for remote jobs, you should check it out.

You can find customer services job easily, go to indeed, and search for remote jobs

Pochino - March 11, 2022, 12:51 pm

you always find a job in retail - just need to know something about the products and you are good - e.g. you want to sell wood craft - learn about it for 2 weeks and apply to a job in the retail - almost immediately you will be accepted

bevc - March 12, 2022, 2:59 am

A lot of admin-y type roles now they'd actually rather you worked from home, because then they don't have to worry about giving you a desk, office, health & safety etc. I work from home, and I'd hate to go back tbh, I hate all that small talk BS.

You could just try contacting businesses in your area, businesses often like a hustler, and you could come up with some reasons why you're looking for specifically WFH.

FOREIGNER - March 12, 2022, 8:52 am

Do you know another language besides english?

?OMEGA? - March 12, 2022, 10:03 am

I do work from home. But i got multiple things i do in life. I work for my self not an employe.

Zexo - March 12, 2022, 2:50 pm

I wish I had work from home. I have all I need and a better chair.

Just try and learn some kind of affiliate marketing. And scale your method when you find one thats working.

BL4CK98 - March 17, 2022, 5:41 am

I am also searching for a job from home but I can't find any.

I wanna learn this affiliate marketing maybe would read something about it and hoping I can get into it ?

Blockonome - March 17, 2022, 7:50 am

I have 2 services that can help you get a remote job.

So if you would like to jump into the digital world, please send me a convo.

PM me if you need any help on where to go to learn. Cause all courses/ebooks what ever are just plain bullshit they make it harder than it is and easier than it is at the same time.

Affiliate marketing is all about traffic nothing else.

Find a method for the right traffic for your niche and scale that son of a bitch till u can't milk that cow no more.

I am trying to get out of the daily grind of a 6am-4pm hands on job, desperately trying to find something that would allow me to work from home/on my computer etc. Search keywords "remote" and "home" in various job sites, since COVID many businesses have seen benefit of people working from home so you will definitely find something.

If you want more flexibility there is always freelance work like Fiverr. You could also work as a virtual assistant and help people with their businesses, personally I have used a VA to help search for profitable products to sell on Amazon FBA.

I remember my friend was offered $50 extra a week for that, sight unseen, when she was just looking for a maid job with an ad in the paper. She was extremely overweight and extremely plain but men didn't know, and just offered her that based on a female name running an ad.

I have also got texts like that from posting ads looking for extra freelance work, on in real life message boards such as at the grocery store or library. Just from a female name they will text and ask for sex without even knowing what you look like, when you are running an ad to tutor kids in English etc just because you have a female name... So many weird and creepy men.

Yes I have only work from home jobs. I work a number of different part time, freelance, self employed and casual jobs from home rather than having a full time job.

Excellentum - March 30, 2022, 1:51 pm

I have never worked home-office, but I want to give it a try soon actually! If everything goes as it's planned in the next 6 months It should happen!

FinanceMan901 - March 30, 2022, 1:59 pm

I work from home 3x a week. 2x in the office. its kind of nice tbh.

but mind you - I work a job that requires a degree and is competitive to get into. im a trader at a investment firm...specifically Citigroup

hotwheels52 - March 30, 2022, 2:05 pm

My mom works from home and loves it. There are many benefits.

Call centres are always hiring, mind numbing work, but it's from home!

KnownSyntax - April 6, 2022, 8:06 pm

I've been remote for almost exclusively for 2 1/2 years now. First 2 years were with my previous employer, and my newest one is perm. remote since the HQ is in CA but I'm in AZ.

There are tons of jobs - what are you looking for ideally, since that could help others give you recommendations (ex; software developer, call center, anything).

Tersaik - April 6, 2022, 9:12 pm

There are a lots of things you can do bro, it depends on your skills or your capital to invest.

Jake Johnson - June 7, 2022, 12:49 pm

At this moment I feel like there are probably lots of different options out there for remote work-from-home jobs. I mean heck even when I search in my local area to see if any new web development jobs opened up I usually always run into multiple remote web development jobs when that's not even what I'm looking for.

Just go to any job search site and use the keywords remote or work from home and see what comes up. If you want something more specific maybe try doing "Customer Service Remote" or "Customer Service work from home" etc... I'm sure there are lots of opportunities out there just need to find the right one for yourself.

I transitioned over to full-time work from home recently. Even through the pandemic I was still going into the office sporadically. Not that they ever required us to, but because I wanted to.

Working from home has its ups and downs. Not having that clear delineation between home and work can be odd. It's easy to find yourself either working more, or working weird hours because you're catching up due to the flexibility you now have during the day. And things as simple as personal days or calling out take on a different meaning. You still do it, but you find yourself sneaking work in more than you would if you worked in the office full time.

I definitely work more hours, working from home, than I did when I had full-time office hours.

That said, you're merging two wants: the type of work and the place of work. Your goal to get out of a hands-on/laborious job is one thing. Working from home is another. If you're open to it, you might find some solace in taking an office role, even if it is in-person.

Otherwise, what are your skills? What kind of work are you capable of performing, that you feel is conducive to working from home?

That's like the dream for most everyone on here. I work hard labor in the hot sun everyday, it sucks [>_<]

Nullusia - June 7, 2022, 5:30 pm

I guess if I was in your position I'd just read e-books and go through resources all day until I find a way to start something for myself through my PC
