

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: How would you raise your

Endorphins - March 14, 2022, 9:30 pm

How would you raise your future child?

Are you going to let them live an easy life or are you going to make them work for it?

I'm really curious since I always see this meme regarding strict parents using chancla, belt, asian parent stereotype, etc. I'm asian too but they were not strict with me. I got scolded from time to time and got slap on my butt and hands but nothing more serious.

systematic - March 14, 2022, 9:36 pm

let them experience mixture of comfort and hardship so their personality can shape up properly

No Bra - March 14, 2022, 9:38 pm

Keeping things like religion and discrimination out of their lives!

Endorphins - March 14, 2022, 9:40 pm

(Mar 14, 2022 09:36 PM)systmatic Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) let them mixture of comfort and hardship
Thank you for your input.

If I may ask what is comfort and hardship for you?

Provide them with their basic needs and let them work for their wants?

(Mar 14, 2022 09:38 PM)NobGra Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Keeping things like religion and discrimination out of their lives!

With a lots of controversy surrounding religion and issues about discrimination, I see where you're going but what if your kids do this?

For example, in a heated argument, they use foul words. How would you react with that?

Maharlika - March 14, 2022, 9:51 pm

for me now im making it easy for him since it was hard for me i dont want him to get through what i went through.

Jerry Smith - March 14, 2022, 9:52 pm

I have a step daughter who just turned 1 today.

We plan on letting her choose who she has as a person (sexual orientation, career choice, life decisions, etc).

We only really want to teach her the essentials of life (IE how society sees right & wrong, how to stay out of trouble, social skills, etc)

I don't see us being strict or critical of her descisions or anything, more or less just trying to show her how the world works and trying to encourage her to do what she loves.

Endorphins - March 14, 2022, 10:10 pm

(Mar 14, 2022 09:51 PM)Maharlika Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) for me now im making it easy for him since it was hard for me i don't want him to get through what I went through.

May I know what do you mean by "hard" in your life?

Are you talking about strict parents, financial issues, social issues, work issues, etc?

If you're not comfortable answering these questions then I respect that. I hope you're doing great there brother.

Maharlika - March 14, 2022, 10:11 pm

(Mar 14, 2022 10:10 PM)Endorphins Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) May I know what do you mean by "hard" in your life?

Are you talking about strict parents, financial issues, social issues, work issues, etc?

If you're not comfortable answering these questions then I respect that. I hope you're doing great there brother.

broken family explains it all bro

Endorphins - March 14, 2022, 10:21 pm

(Mar 14, 2022 09:52 PM)Jerry Smith Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I have a step daughter who just turned 1 today.

We plan on letting her choose who she has as a person (sexual orientation, career choice, life decisions, etc).

We only really want to teach her the essentials of life (IE how society sees right & wrong, how to stay out of trouble, social skills, etc)

I don't see us being strict or critical of her descisions or anything, more or less just trying to show her how the world works and trying to encourage her to do what she loves.

I appreciate you giving your thorough input on this topic.

Your parenting is just like what my parent does but what would you do if she do what you don't want her to do?

Will you give her a little scold, a little spank? For me, kids don't have a concept of right or wrong yet. They just wanna feel their surroundings and I'm curious how would you handle those kinds of situations.

grady - March 14, 2022, 10:28 pm

The biggest thing that I didn't have growing up was the ability to share my fuck-ups with my parents. I was always getting spanked or punished in some way/shape/form. From that, my first goal with my kids is to make sure that they are able to come to me when they make mistakes and trust me to help them get through them and learn from them rather than immediately being shut down and chastized for making mistakes. Kids are going to make mistakes.

Jerry Smith - March 14, 2022, 10:34 pm

(Mar 14, 2022 10:21 PM)Endorphins Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I appreciate you giving your thorough input on this topic.

Your parenting is just like what my parent does but what would you do if she do what you don't want her to do?

Will you give her a little scold, a little spank? For me, kids don't have a concept of right or wrong yet. They just wanna feel their surroundings and I'm curious how would you handle those kinds of situations.

Considering she's only just turned 1, I'm not too sure how it will look. How I would assume it would look depends on what it is that's out of line exactly. People are very maiaible, esppecially at a young age. I can't see physical discipline being issued unless it comes to something extremely serious. I feel like at most a day or two grounded (loss of all/most privileges) would be enough to send the message. Especially when you consider that both myself and the mama have ADHD, which has a serious impact on the upbringing of children. A lot of times children with ADHD act out without meaning to do any harm, they're just too young to realize the real impact of their actions.

Endorphins - March 14, 2022, 10:36 pm

(Mar 14, 2022 10:11 PM)Maharlika Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) broken family explains it all bro
I'm sorry to hear that. Hope you plan well who are you going to be with in the future. But even if we plan it so well, there would be such an event that we cannot control.

Anyway, keep on doing your best brother. ?

Maharlika - March 14, 2022, 10:38 pm

(Mar 14, 2022 10:36 PM)Endorphins Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I'm sorry to hear that. Hope you plan well who are you going to be with in the future. But even if we plan it so well, there would be such an event that we cannot control.

Anyway, keep on doing your best brother. ?
yes brother see you around!

Endorphins - March 14, 2022, 10:52 pm

(Mar 14, 2022 10:28 PM)?Infamy Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) The biggest thing that I didn't have growing up was the ability to share my fuck-ups with my parents. I was always getting spanked or punished in some way/shape/form. From that, my first goal with my kids is to make sure that they are able to come to me when they make mistakes and trust me to help them get through them and learn from them rather than immediately being shut down and chastized for making mistakes. Kids are going to make mistakes.

I feel you, buddy. I, myself hide fucked up shit from my parents. They don't torture me or anything but it hurts me whenever they scold me with a loud voice. I can tolerate those tone of their voice today than I am when I was a kid.

I get why they are angry and I learned a lot with their method. The negative side effect of their method was I've been secretive to them. I know I'm wrong and I don't want to get scolded.

But here is the catch, I want my future kids to be able to tell me their story without being scared or punish BUT I don't know the approach. Like I said with the other reply, for me, kids can't discern the right from wrong. What if they do such horrible things like hurting other kids. Talking in a calm or angry manner might not teach them.

A10247 - March 15, 2022, 10:19 am

I would give them flip phones so they can play snake.

?OMEGA? - March 15, 2022, 1:43 pm

They are gonna be working hard for what they want/need.

BL4CK98 - March 17, 2022, 1:42 am

I will let them do whatever they want but i will tell them the consequences of everything. If I don't let them do something they will do it behind my back so it is better to not hide. For example if they want to smoke I will not say no to them but I will tell them the health consequenceses smoke will have on their lives.

Yanix - March 17, 2022, 4:40 am

(Mar 14, 2022 09:30 PM)Endorphins Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) How would you raise your future child?

Are you going to let them live an easy life or are you going to make them work for it?

I'm really curious since I always see this meme regarding strict parents using chancla, belt, asian parent stereotype, etc. I'm asian too but they were not strict with me. I got scolded from time to time and got slap on my butt and hands but nothing more serious.

We all wanted the best for the future of our children but based on my experienced there is nothing as smooth and easy thing for we don't hold our future.

Always expect the unexpected...the less expectations the less disappointments.

630 - March 17, 2022, 2:41 pm

I was raised fairly strict but I didn't have too tight of a leash. I plan on doing the same if I ever have kids. I'll set some ground rules, let them learn from their mistakes but also let them enjoy the freedoms that life offers. I will make them work for it though. I wish I was pushed into working earlier. It didn't hit me until early college that work experience / internships go a long way.

Komodo - March 17, 2022, 2:43 pm

Probably somewhere around the way I raised the first child haha.

I--I - March 20, 2022, 7:42 pm

I'd probably let them believe in things like Santa and stuff, but I would teach any religion.

I'd mostly want to show them things I'm interested in and have a lil mini-me, but I also would do my best to be patient. I got yelled at and blamed for a lot of things I didn't even do, when I was a kid. I think it's better to ask your kid what's wrong and then explain things to them calmy when they're upset.

Disease - March 21, 2022, 7:26 am

(Mar 14, 2022 09:30 PM)Endorphins Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) How would you raise your future child?

Are you going to let them live an easy life or are you going to make them work for it?

I'm really curious since I always see this meme regarding strict parents using chancla, belt, asian parent stereotype, etc. I'm asian too but they were not strict with me. I got scolded from time to time and got slap on my butt and hands but nothing more serious.

As a father of a nine year old let me tell you- this is a difficult question. And one I think about all of the time. Also one that had you asked me 9+ years ago, my answer then would be drastically different than it is now. But less to do with punishment, as you referred to, and more to do with finding that border between providing a nice quality of life, and flat out spoiling.

Punishment wise- my wife and I are strict, but not to the extent of your examples. I've never hit my son, for example. And we've been fortunate that he's a well-behaved kid. But that's also because we employ punishment in other ways, and by now wavering on our expectations. He knows that if we request something, we're not going to be okay with him not doing that.

Goku - March 21, 2022, 7:43 am

I would make them work for it.

Kids who are brought up in an easy life usually have it harder later in life.

One thing is important, do good for others as much as possible.

I feel like this and previous generation is brought up with the idea that you need to take care of yourself. Of course, this is true. But let's not forget that humans are also a specie that strive when working together. I feel like this is also a reason why we, humanity as a whole, can't reach a consensus.

L1I DuRk - March 21, 2022, 7:49 am

(Mar 14, 2022 10:28 PM)?Infamy Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) The biggest thing that I didn't have growing up was the ability to share my fuck-ups with my parents. I was always getting spanked or punished in some way/shape/form. From that, my first goal with my kids is to make sure that they are able to come to me when they make mistakes and trust me to help them get through them and learn from them rather than immediately being shut down and chastized for making mistakes. Kids are going to make mistakes.

I gatch you fam where you coming from, most of us went through the hard way with our parents and that crushed part of our self-esteem again.

iNviZ - March 21, 2022, 4:44 pm

I'm strict with my kids but also they know they can tell me anything. Really my daughters getting into dating. It's a hard pill to swallow but I'd rather be a dad that they can talk to and not hide shit from me hotwheels52 - March 22, 2022, 1:52 pm

I don't think I'll ever have children.

AONetwork - March 22, 2022, 1:56 pm

I got two kids on my own currently, 5 & 7 years old.

I'm doing my best to balance it, they should always feel safe to fall back to me as a parent, but they sure have to work and follow thru with things.

Very much focus on school, how to behave and be comfortable talking to larger groups, as that's something I find important to be able to handle if you want to do more than working 9am - 5pm works with a shitty salary.

Excellentum - March 30, 2022, 2:01 am

The whole universe is based on balance! So the right thing for me is to find the balance between providing an easy life and teaching them to work!

(Mar 14, 2022 09:51 PM)Maharlika Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) for me now im making it easy for him since it was hard for me i dont want him to get through what i went through.

Don't you think you are doing a disservice to him? I hope I am wrong, but easy life creates weak people, and one day it might be a problem! I am not saying he must suffer, but the balance is recommended! Wish you all the best!

Mac Miller - April 6, 2022, 6:16 pm

I would raise them liberally but try to teach them a good work ethic.

2xTheTap115 - April 6, 2022, 6:44 pm

(Mar 14, 2022 09:30 PM)Endorphins Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) How would you raise your future child?

Are you going to let them live an easy life or are you going to make them work for it?

I'm really curious since I always see this meme regarding strict parents using chancla, belt, asian parent stereotype, etc. I'm asian too but they were not strict with me. I got scolded from time to time and got slap on my butt and hands but nothing more serious.

I myself was brought up in quite "harsh" conditions.

From an early age, my parents taught me work, independence and resourcefulness in life, which only turned out to be good for me, so when I was raising my children, I would do the same.

It is known that every parent wants the best fate for their child and will always give him the best, but excessive "pampering" children in my opinion only harms.