turned into a meme channel.

Sort it out. If you want to discuss malware topics, hacking tools and more... then reply

If you think that "there is no place like 127.0.0.1" the just go back to the lounge

Lrrr - March 16, 2022, 1:44 pm

Bet, if you want to talk about hostile container takeovers, Kubernetes exploits, or big data analysis I guess I'll join the convo

I'm down for some talks, hmu

I imagine you enjoy creating elaborate labyrinths with a local entrance as well?

Unless this guy named Lrrr and others get serious about Hackercraft, I am open to using my Syndicate for Educational Purposes. That is, if you want to represent yourself within an organized unit on the forums.

Spoiler (Click to View)

I am not interested in the Malware side of things yet, but I am interested in security. I've done some cloud security and implemented vulnerability scanners (owasp, nesssus).

Do we have a specific topic to start off with?

Would be an interesting one. I've only briefly read into the theory on how one would escalate privileges from docker containers, but I have not taken the time to go in-depth to it.

When it comes to big data: I have only been a skiddie with hadoop jobs.

Spoiler (Click to View)

Off topic, but I need to vent on how horrible excel truly is. Their function box and 'big data' analysis capability is some ass. You'd be surprised how many requests I have received for tens of thousands of rows to be shoved into an excel spreadsheet. Next thing you know the requestor complains about not being able to use table filters, it's slow, or whatever their conundrum may be.

People really need to realize that there are alternatives to excel...

Currently have a small personal cloud and cyber wiki using <https://docs.readthedocs.io/en/stable/intro/getting-started-with-mkdocs.html>.

I'd be willing to convert the markdown to MyBB to get us started if there is enough interest for one.

Due to edit limits, we'd would need a V3ndor (such as yourself) to maintain it...

Yeah mate your perfect candidate we need.

(Mar 16, 2022 07:31 PM)forfeit Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) If you're talking about malware, yea, it's kind of a grey area for me right now. I don't want to implicate in anything retarded, and I don't really want to disclose private methods. However, if we're on the same wavelength, I'm open to discussion of simulation of what the big boys use and their 1:1 methods. Sure.

This is something I'm looking for, but I explained it to Educational Purposes that I'm pretty burnt out of "forum content" or whatever and I'm not here to release 0 days in windows for free.

Imao...

should've sent him some ransomware

I think he's talking about malware and malware infrastructure, given the ephemeral nature of cloud environments, it could be resourceful to have an infrastructure for staging and opsec.

Welcome mate... glad to have you on board. Ill contact everyone this week once we get few additional members

Waiting for a few more applicants and trying to figure the best place to hold conversations.. as discord banned me too many times

Keep coming with interest

I already bait myself out on discord, any suggestions on simplicity for comms but securing would be great

I still vote for discord since our goal is not to create a threat, more like educational purposes and have a talk about things. Don't see a reason to get banned because of that.

I think HF still supports xmpp.

Alternatively signal with a fake phone number.

That's my initial thoughts

I'm interested in joining this group. I'm by no way means the most skilled but I do hold a fair bit of knowledge, I'd be willing to share that knowledge and learn from more experienced users.

IMHO if people can't set up XMPP with OTR then they shouldn't be part of this group. I do have another idea for secure comms in the group if the current user doesn't pull through.

Yes perfect hmu with suggestions and I agree... If you cant use xmpp with otr this isnt for you anyway.

I dont like telegram its too messy, discord too bait...
