Thread: [\[WTS\] Real life human gore Images with a handwritten note or image of your choosing.](#) metalcoverservices - April 11, 2022, 12:04 am

Not entirely sure if this goes here, and I won't be able to post any examples for obvious reasons.

The service is as-explained.

I am on-hand for around 10-12 autopsies a day.

I offer to handwrite or print out an image of your choosing and send you a photograph of that image anywhere around or inside a real life corpse.

I can offer clean photography of any organ of your choosing, including the brain. I can also offer mangled up and brutal photography of eviscerated corpses or intense traumatic injury that may be suitable for something like metal album covers.

I am able to accommodate a large variety of requests although some may take more time to produce your custom product.

I am more than happy to do up to 5 free vouch copies for trusted users to establish my legitimacy.

If this is not allowed here, I apologise, and request advice on where I can offer this service.

Well shit aye, not much surprises me after 11 years on this forum but this is certainly new hahaha. My gut (no pun intended) tells me this should be against the rules but I don't think there are any rules specified for this kind of thing.

That being the case, I'll take a VC and vouch for you if you like?

Thanks, that's 1/5. I'll await a website officials response before I actually confirm any vouch copies but as soon as I receive that this service is alright, I'll get to them.

Also, to any staff reading this, are you able to recommend another website where such a service might be provided? thanks

Blunt - April 11, 2022, 5:22 am

Wow never a dull moment here on hf.... If the staff is cool with it I'll get one lmao

Im extremely lost for words ?????

I want one with a brain and the note to say "don't mess with carrot"

Omniscient - April 11, 2022, 12:49 pm

As-is I don't see this as a policy violation.

ubas - April 11, 2022, 12:55 pm

holy shit lol I've never heard of someone selling custom autopsy pics, closest anyone will get to a redroom I suppose ya'll are clowns for negative popping this dude. it is an original, albeit niche, service.

I can see why the service would divide people, I mean it's people's relatives that we're getting pics of presumably without them knowing so I understand why people would be against it. Doesn't bother me though, I'd personally be fine with someone taking pics of me for internet enjoyment if I was dead.

Lucio - April 12, 2022, 3:21 pm

I'm on the fence with this one. PMing you lol.

Komodo - April 12, 2022, 3:33 pm

This is fucked.

I worked on a fire department, I brought bodies to morgues. Have you ever seen a parent absolutely destroyed while you zip up their child in a body bag? I have, I've done it. I've seen the look on the parents eyes as you load them up and they watch you drive off.

You're desecrating bodies for a profit. Completely against your code.

Also Omniscient this is against the law. Health care workers are bound by a law called HIPAA (Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act) stating they won't give out any patient personal information, including pictures of them without written consent. This also goes into the realm of a pathologist or a coroner.

OP is not in USA. Again, this thread doesn't violate HF site policy as it is presented. Even if OP was in the USA, that would be his problem if his service had an illegal element to it.

Omniscient - April 12, 2022, 5:31 pm

No sales trashing. Keep your moral and ethical opinions about the service to yourself.

K1. - April 12, 2022, 6:29 pm

Possibly one of the most interesting/niche services I have ever seen on HF

I am beyond confused but hey, you do you man

??` Abe ?? - April 13, 2022, 12:21 am

I'll definitely take a vouch copy !

Angela White - April 13, 2022, 12:45 am not sure why anyone would want such a thing.

Blockonome - April 13, 2022, 12:46 am

I see there are still 1 spot for vouch copy, I am ready to take it, unless it has already been taken?

Blatngu® - April 13, 2022, 1:50 am

That's some nasty things, I've been on this forum for about 10 years and I've never seen something like this.

This is fucking immoral. Yeah Omni let's keep opinions outside this thread, I know it's your forum but hey don't get paranoid if year after year people are getting strange all around the world.

GLWS.

Just my two cents

Practise - April 13, 2022, 3:53 am

What? That's crazy.

Some real chainsaw massacre pictures...

Beyond the obvious ethical quandaries offering this service entails, I am still curious as to how you would even go about running a operation like this. Clearly there are risks in running this kind of business without being caught given the assumption this is most likely illegal in most places. With my near zero knowledge on autopsies / post mortem procedures a few questions come to mind:

Are these individuals that you are performing the autopsies on people who are unidentified / unidentifiable? I have to assume that you wouldn't do anything noticeable to a body that may be returned for a funeral.

Where do you even dispose of body parts used as a part of this service? Is there just a bin for miscellaneous biohazardous material that no one looks into and just removes?

Wouldn't anyone question why there are potential body parts that aren't supposed to be removed being removed? Are you putting "used" organs back in place after you're done with them?

Is there anything you wouldn't do within your service?

Personally, I'd have to say that there are certainly better ways to make a buck. Desecrating a corpse is pretty niche and quite out there.

I also have my doubts people want to have "contracted customer" for this kind of service being marked down and recorded...

Haven't heard from OP since he posted this. Probably just LARP'ing. Move on folks.

Agreed. Ethics, Morals, that's all irrelevant. All anyone has done in this thread is exert Opinion, this is no worse than E-Whoring if you want to compare sins.

I doubt OP is doing much with this and it's probably just a gag, don't let it get you all too riled up.

I would however be interested in seeing further activity from OP following this.
