I respect the music, but I never had the patience to learn any instruments.

Performing must be such a good feeling when people are absolutely loving what you are delivering.

Good job!

I went on a few tours with my old band. Fun as heck, but scary as fuck standing in front of thousands of people and play your own music.

Blunt - April 12, 2022, 10:25 am

That's beautiful fam. What brand is that??? And what did you have it tuned at.

It's a crafter 12 string played with 11 strings tuned to OPEN C with capo on 4th fret, if you want a tutorial for the song I can link you one in the dms jesus you went on for ten minutes. I can only play the guitar for 3 minutes and then my fingers need a break from all the plucking.

Rionxee - April 12, 2022, 6:26 pm

Pretty sick man, that was awesome to see. I definitely heard a little bit of Al Di Meola in there.

That's super cool man, 10 mins wow. God-like fingers. My fav was the slower parts like the 6 min mark.

Prettykitty - April 14, 2022, 8:37 am

It's actually supposed to be played way slower, the actual piece is 12 minutes, I was really nervous lmao

7:00-8:00 was my favorite part for sure, I don't know why but to me that seems like it would thrash the skin on your fingers.

Very well done, keep doing what you're doing. I hope to pickup acoustic one day as well, seems like a great little hobby or passion to get into.

Thank you sir! It does hurt the fingers, your left hand that plays the chords and notes get calloused pretty quickly, but like you said the right hand does get thrashed, eventually it callouses too but you gotta deal with the cuticles on your hand getting torn off a few times, you should totally pick up acoustic. Even if you're just playing basic chord songs that's super rewarding

Thank you for listening! :) I wanted to reply to this last night but I was pretty loaded off gin. It Really means a lot that you gave me that award, I never thought I'd have something so cool on my profile, been around HF for a minute and this is the most I've felt apart of this community, or a forum community in a long time! Thank you for creating and running HF
