Thread: Backed into a \$150,000 BMW

Bluffer - May 1, 2022, 11:30 am

How's everyone's weekend going? I drove to the big city after work last night and by the time I stopped was so tired and when I was leaving a place I backed into a car and lightly tapped it. Turns out it's a top of the line, brand new M6 BMW.

Barely a scuff on his car, nothing on mine. But he's worried about sensors fucking up on his car since the littlest thing can screw those up. My best friend is a mechanic and went to school and shit so he knows about sensors and told me if there was anything wrong with the sensors it'd show in the dash immediately. Well there was nothing in his dash.

The guy told me he will not report it to insurance and will just deal with it himself. He was cool about it he told me he didn't want to fck me over (my insurance would sky rocket I live in commy land).

This first accident I've ever had and I pride myself on being a good driver but I was just so tired that I didn't even look out my rear window when I backed up. ?

You gave him a nice love tap. Happens quite often and goes unseen most of the time.

You got blessed. If there was no major damage calling it in is the worst way to go.

My weekend was alright! I rode my motobike around 100 miles to visit a friend. Great fun.

I've had these happen to me but I never cared enough to go after the other person. I do worse offroading to be messing with people for love taps.
