What are the major differences?

What is the advantage of not investing money and investing money in something you do not really need to spend any money on.

Can you do something you do not need to invest money at all, but most people do?

Edit: IF you need money to invest with, what budget do you recommend saving up?

I've tried a lot of things to make money online, and it is significantly harder if you do not have some investment money.

The major difference is that one is scaleable whereas the other is not scaleable.

Say you are a business and u want to expand, u would require manpower or tech upgrades, r&d and so on. These all need money

On the other hand, without money u have 24h to spend on completing task that gives you money like making videos, designing & making websites, etc. In a way this is scaleable but to a small extent as it requires u always upskill urself so that u are on top of ur game and getting paid for it. Over time, u will be able to do these tasks in a shorter time as u gain expertise and thus increasing ur pay as well

In economics this is called the law of diminishing returns. The more you scale up, the harder it will become to make substantial gains.

you can invest then you either spend that money to enjoy life like buy food, clothes you like etc. Or you would invest it into business or buy land etc. The investment part is nothing but a gamble you can lose it all and not enjoy that money or you can make more money with it and enjoy more in life. There's no benefits of doing it or not doing it. It's what you want out of life. Do you want to one day be able to make shit ton of money while doing nothing all day and making money while sleeping and if so you invest and work your way up on getting and if you don't then you would be perfectly ok of working a 9-5 job and just focus more on your own life. Investments at the start you will have to work around the clock like hard to get to that level of always making money even if you're not working.
