

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Practical Money Making methods | No autistic shit like make \$XX,XXX/mo.

Investor - May 7, 2022, 2:48 am

So lets face it you're after ye ole' economic opportunity from your bedroom. But you see all these cringe ass titles on the fucking forum. Oh, happy day I've gone and done it now, the triggering. PAUSE! For just one second.....

Okay, still with me? Good.

Now imagine, the computer screen is just a box, oh wait it is....Now imagine you take a step back, and are going to evaluate your surroundings like your room, and the world around you alright. Okay, notice that separation in mindset, versus the PC. You experience rationality in the real world, for good measure do that one more time, but hold onto that thought process, and mentality for just one second.

Now I want you to visit the ebook bazaar, and look at some of the titles, evaluate them with that same feeling, and mindset.

Then come back, just glimpse over it.

You can find it here:

Ebook Bazaar

HOLY FUCK, seems kinda retarded right? Okay, perfect since you agree now lets move onto one piece of solid advice.

Common sense, there is a FRAMEWORK, of principals aka concepts that you can apply to many things to make money.

Go sign up for an ebay account, now check for shit people are dumping off. Free shit people wanna get rid of perfect, pick it up and resell it on ebay, craigslist, letgo etc.

Got a truck, perfect see someone throwing out furnature, look at college dorms, assiste living. Sometimes old folks can't take it with em, and really end up throwing it out. What a waste! Google "Consignment shops" find ones that will deduct space rent from sales, since you didnt pay shit for the furnature, and its a hot seller, people will buy it, the shop will sell it for you, and you dont have to fuck with it. You might have to clean it up if it smells, or is stained but thats fine for a few hundred bucks profit.

Don't know where to start, or have, skills, transportation or money? Thats okay, you can apply the same thing to shit no one wants like tools, tvs, etc or some shit you score cheap you might be able to sell some items from garage sales, or throw aways to a pawn shop for quick cash, thats fine this is survival, it may not be full proof, like the furniture, but theres good money to be made.

Arbitrage applies across the board, so does surplus value in selling shit people are throwing away.

Learning something as simple as detailing, and buying shit from the 99c store is fine too, services are an easy way to get started, a mobile detailer, and facebook are your friend.

Looking for good read? I recommend the $100 startup for inspiration.

The ideology that matters here is being able to scope out economic opportunity, and finding a way to deliver with minimal cost if any, it doesn't apply to just the above examples, abstract thinking along with analysis will give you unlimited opportunity, or the transference of wasted value in discarded/unwanted items, and ways to turn them into cash.

2xTheTap115 - May 7, 2022, 8:22 am

(May 7, 2022 02:48 AM)PYA™ Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) So lets face it you're after ye ole' economic opportunity from your bedroom. But you see all these cringe ass titles on the fucking forum. Oh, happy day I've gone and done it now, the triggering. PAUSE! For just one second.....

Okay, still with me? Good.

Now imagine, the computer screen is just a box, oh wait it is....Now imagine you take a step back, and are going to evaluate your surroundings like your room, and the world around you alright. Okay, notice that separation in mindset, versus the PC. You experience rationality in the real world, for good measure do that one more time, but hold onto that thought process, and mentality for just one second.

Now I want you to visit the ebook bazaar, and look at some of the titles, evaluate them with that same feeling, and mindset.

Then come back, just glimpse over it.

You can find it here:

Ebook Bazaar

HOLY FUCK, seems kinda retarded right? Okay, perfect since you agree now lets move onto one piece of solid advice.

Common sense, there is a FRAMEWORK, of principals aka concepts that you can apply to many things to make money.

Go sign up for an ebay account, now check for shit people are dumping off. Free shit people wanna get rid of perfect, pick it up and resell it on ebay, craigslist, letgo etc.

Got a truck, perfect see someone throwing out furniture, look at college dorms, assiste living. Sometimes old folks can't take it with em, and really end up throwing it out. What a waste! Google "Consignment shops" find ones that will deduct space rent from sales, since you didnt pay shit for the furniture, and its a hot seller, people will buy it, the shop will sell it for you, and you dont have to fuck with it. You might have to clean it up if it smells, or is stained but thats fine for a few hundred bucks profit.

Don't know where to start, or have, skills, transportation or money? Thats okay, you can apply the same thing to shit no one wants like tools, tvs, etc or some shit you score cheap you might be able to sell some items from garage sales, or throw aways to a pawn shop for quick cash, thats fine this is survival, it may not be full proof, like the furniture, but theres good money to be made.

Arbitrage applies across the board, so does surplus value in selling shit people are throwing away.

Learning something as simple as detailing, and buying shit from the 99c store is fine too, services are an easy way to get started, a mobile detailer, and facebook are your friend.

Looking for good read? I recommend the $100 startup for inspiration.

The ideology that matters here is being able to scope out economic opportunity, and finding a way to deliver with minimal cost if any, it doesn't apply to just the above examples, abstract thinking along with analysis will give you unlimited opportunity, or the transference of wasted value in discarded/unwanted items, and ways to turn them into cash.

Right, re-selling is a great way to earn money. Having a company myself (a shop with furniture / antiques / home accessories), I have traveled many times around bazaars or such curious "exhibitions" in Germany, Sweden or Denmark and I was able to get things for free or for a nominal fee, which I then sold in my store with 30 -times higher price. People often get rid of valuable things on which you can earn really decent money. Just think?

diablospartan - May 8, 2022, 8:37 am

Yea reseling its a great way to make money but i peefer the online thing stuff ,i dont like working offline going with the car for the stuff etc