I have worked wirh Queue-IT, their system supports different integration options.

Some has methods to bypass, some doesn't. Make sure the guy you hire knows which method is used and how to bypass.

This sounds like a topic that could easily be targeted by scammers pretending to be able to do this task for you.

I would recommend using a middleman and ALWAYS use a HF contract.

Hit me up for questions, either about middleman, contracts or questions on how Queue-IT works.

Off topic, I have been in the Queue-IT dev team office ?

Thank you for your reply!!! And you're totally correct! The guy above you just tried to scam me thinking I was too stupid not to realise him using inspect element! -_-'

I don't know if I can PM you or not but in case you don't receive a PM from me in the next 10mins, please contact me. Thank you!

Literally this, Queue-it moved from being client sided and easily bypassable with UA changes etc, They then made it server sided with signed tokens which can't be replicated.

Your opening yourself up to scammers. No one will sell you the exploit. Like myself, I only sell links.
