Thread: Good Paying Jobs Online?

Vader - May 17, 2022, 5:07 pm

While I'm working on my brands I am also working as a busboy at a restaurant. Definitely takes away more time from my life then I want it to. I was wondering if anyone knows any decent paying jobs I can do on my computer that will have consistent pay. Currently I make around $400 a week paid from my employer. Thanks!

Well, any programming job will pay you better than $400/week. Learn front-end development (HTML, CSS, JavaScript) and become a webdev.

HTML = Text on screen

CSS = Formatting

JavaScript = Functions

If you decide you want to learn more about web-development, I would say look into bootstrap (makes CSS a bit easier) and then choose a JavaScript framework to learn.

- Angular
- React
- Vue

Those are some of the more popular frameworks. Dozens more out there.

Maybe that'll help you. Idk much else as I am not a front-end dev.

The VAs I have make a couple grand a month so I'd say join the VA job market and hope someone rich hires you.

Yea I am working on my own brands, but I want to get some guaranteed paid work from an employer to help out with my daily expenses.

Wow thanks for that info, I've done front end web dev in the past but I'm rusty. I'll try to see if I can get on something like that.

Interesting. I've thought about VA work as well. Definitely would be boring work though. I'll check it out thanks!

An easy thing I have a close friend doing is reselling people's cheap services. Think hard on the possibilities because there are some truly unique ones.

Web dev and you'll easily make $400 a week part-time.

Learn JS, React, HTML, CSS, and NodeJS.

Become webdev is one of the options. But of course it requires effort and hard work to make all the jobdesk done on time.
