Lately, I've been thinking to give it a try, so I wanted to know if there are people that make a living with affiliate marketing if so LMK. I would be thankful for every single piece of advice! ????

There's some really good fb groups for this stuff my buddy tried getting me into it you will find a treasure trove over there and much less liars than a forum that grants anonymity.

It just seems interesting to me! Of course, I am open to any other suggestions for making money online if you have some!

The only thing I've really seen with affiliate marketing is all the YouTube gurus are clinging to it now as the way "they swear they make a ton of money". To me, that usually means it's highly saturated and difficult to succeed there.

Try thinking outside the box :)

Could you recommend me something except e-whoring that doesn't require a huge investment in the beginning? ????

You can become highly successful with affiliate marketing if done right. However, in order to really start making a consistent decent amount of money from it you would need to put in a lot of time and effort in order to grow your network or audience to who you would be marketing.

There is a girl in my local city that she has a very large following on Instagram and TikTok. She does makeup videos on those platforms and then markets the products she uses to her viewers. She does extremely well with this as being one of the only people in my city who has bought a Lamborghini. The health and beauty niche is extremely successful for affiliate marketing if done right. However, it takes time to actually create engaging content to grow pages where you can build your own audience up.

I know a lot of the YouTube "Money making Gurus" post all the time about affiliate marketing. However, most things they post are usually overly saturated and not exactly how they describe them.

Honestly, if you are looking for ways to make money online I would recommend you to look into learning graphic design or front-end web development. Neither of them have a big learning curve at all and there are tons of opportunities in each market to make money.

I come from affiliate marketing. Have made a lot of money there and work with some larger players in the US for deals. I came to the forum to learn more of different marketing services I can provide to others, but there are also some very talented people here that I think could do well with affiliated marketing.

I'd be happy to answer any questions people have on the subject in the thread.

Does it really take that long to build? What about buying someone's existing site to start?

You've got to wonder why they are selling it. Either because it stopped being profitable or because it requires too much effort for them to consider it worthwhile.

Traffic is the most important thing in affiliate marketing. 2nd, you need to chose your niche your niche wisely.

Planning is the key of this business. I made some decent income with this when I was student. Later on I had to give up because of my regular corporate job. But I am planning to start this again as I am no more a corporate slave.

I will prefer running dropshipping business rather than joined on Affiliate partnership.

(Sep 3, 2022 09:55 AM)phantomman55 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) That's too expensive. First off no one will sell a website that's generating money. It's either 2 things.

Either it stopped making money or there's too many issues that they cannot handle or fix.

So, when they do sell it they won't tell you it stopped making money. They will sell you it at a price when it did.

This could easily be $10,000 or more for just a website and it's domain name.

So, you would pay $10,000 to find out if it's worth anything or not. If there's no traffic then it would have been easier and better to just start something of your own that could cost you $200 a month. No one in their right mind will sell a website that's generating money.

Well they will say they have too many other projects going and don't have the time to put into it any more, but that it still makes X amount and could make a lot more if properly cared for and monetized.....? Idk maybe some of them are telling the truth? And plenty on sale for a lot less than $10,000

Drop shipping seems horrible to me. ? And I hate when I buy something and then find out it's drop shipping so will take a million years to arrive and the dropshippers say one of the drawbacks to the job is people always getting furious because their packages are so late.

One time when my son was 7 in late October I ordered some children's books online for him for Christmas, but they arrived in January then I realised it was drop shipping. Fuck dropshipping. ?
