Considering my account age... I was a very young child thinking HF would be my golden ticket into the 'hackermans' era of my life. Didn't happen but we're here.

That's funny. But the days you joined we made hella money from booters during those times. Good times.

Can't even remember, probably got here through google when I was a teenager trying to find a booter lmao

This seems to be the general consensus whenever this question is presented. The booter days of hf definitely had other shit popping at the time and I have never seen any of those smaller communities get mentioned. Always interesting to me.

i guess a lot of ppl are more than 11 years here (for me 11) - If you still remember how you got on a forum (no matter how good it is)- you're either a genius or always alone ^^

I was introduced by a friend many years ago (around 2009) we both sat on here for hours each day on his account. I went away and studied to refine my skills... then eventually signed up myself
