They are a little more of the healthier side as far as sugar and stuff but I feel like they should be illegal because I basically get cracked out drinking them. But look em up and give em a try atleast once.

None, I utilize medications to calm me down, both mentally and physically because I can't function properly when 'normal'. Things spiral out of control without the xanax and beta blockers, and I mean that in the sense that I cannot stop working and sleep just goes out the window.

Speaking of fizz drinks, does anyone recall these two brands that completed disappeared after the 2000's?

It was Singapore-based so I'm not sure if people who haven't visited there during the same time period have heard of these drinks.
Maybe some of our SG users may remember it.

Monster if I'm really needing a kick.

It's the opposite for me, Red Bull always leave with some sort of weird aftertaste while Monsters (especially the flavor variants) just taste like a normal fizzy drink.

I've personally always preferred coffee for my day rather than energy drinks though but I would probably carry a Red Bull/Monster over to the gym if I don't have time to make an intra-workout drink.

As for the flavor you most likely won't find it, I've just found out (through the monster fandom.wiki, lmao the internet will never cease to amaze me) that it was released back in 2014 but never been distributed in the United States, seems like it was limited to a few European countries.
