Thread: can i install my botnet to AZURE?

laydohignu - June 8, 2022, 8:35 pm

crazyRDP is slow and it has win 2019 server.

I have a Azure account and i install windows 10 pro.

Can i use this RDP for Install and spread my botnet? Will I be noticed by Azure?

There is always a chance they will notice and they will most likely take it down if they do. It is probably not the best idea and even more so if it is connected in any way to you so you should just look for better hosting elsewhere. But anything past a few hundred clients online will almost for sure be noticed especially if it is a known rat since there is most likely something scanning traffic for known malware one report and your box will get suspended, make sure you use a domain and not a ip if you use them but i would recommend a host that is bulletproof so it does not get suspended

It all depends on the flow, requests and Complaints. But of course it is not safe. For this you better use a third-party service, which you can pay in cryptocurrency. In any case, for a botnet you are always better to have an additional mirror, which would contain information about your bots in case the main one is blocked.

You can do that but for sure your account would be suspended pretty fast.

Okay i understand. i will continue with CrazyRDP or like a other "Bulletproof hosting" like panamaserver etc.

Thanks for your all answers.

Every entity is capable of bending to the feds, get yourself a secure VPN, TAILS, and TOR.
Goodluck.
