Thread: Platform offering Loans without collateral

Pomaya - June 25, 2022, 12:38 am

Which are the new or old platforms that can provide crypto loans without collateral?

Lilith - June 25, 2022, 1:17 am

I highly doubt anyone is going to give out unsecured loans in this market.

Somehow managed to payback all pending loans but no collateral left to takeout a new one but have to reinvest in market. So looking for details of such platforms/loansharks in crypto.

I wouldn't recommend investing money you cannot afford to loose.

I wouldn't take out a loan if you're buying Crypto that's just not a smart idea.

Started with a small capital so minute that huge losses don't matter in the size compared to initial investment.

with proper risk management it is possible.

In this case, loans were paid back but there is no capital to ride the market tide coming ahead thats what is bothering here.

Growth.

Uhhh, I guess Benny the Shark from The Bronx is just make believe then?

For real though OP, what are you expecting to find on the internet? That's way too high risk for the lender if they can't threaten to, physically, not digitally, break your knee caps.

Junot - June 26, 2022, 11:46 am

Question for OP.

Would you giving crypto loans from your side without taking a collateral?

Omniscient - June 26, 2022, 12:19 pm

This is nonsense. Who do you think is going to loan you money this way? How about you ask a friend or relative? Or they already know you're a high-risk to default?

SIM-1169085 - June 26, 2022, 5:49 pm

Who would loan you this money and not just invest it themselves.

Loans for bitcoin are a horrible idea because if the price starts coming down you start defaulting on your loan and it could start a massive domino effect of people having to sell their crypto.

Mr. Moe - June 26, 2022, 6:59 pm there's such thing as "payday loans" and you can just use that money to buy crypto.

No matter what, unsecured loans will always look at your income, and debt-earnings ratio

I feel third degree burns over 2000 miles away.

On Topic: I believe that you will not find anyone willing to do that, unless you can give collateral like a car, house or something else.

Pomaya - June 27, 2022, 10:09 pm

There is a reason for everything to happen.

I used to get this type of loans from my users on a popular p2p bitcoin trading website. One time i got 3 BTC without collateral from an Indian good crypto net worth person with the pretext of returning when it is needed on his end that was the only agreement between us. But it was for once.

So this post is made.

I hope members are not offended by this thread.

You won't find loans like you are looking for from reputable sources. There's loan sharks, but that won't work online and be prepared to pay 5-10% per month.

Decentralized loans without collateral... You have to be joking thinking this exists.
