Yeah, I've used Blackberries and stuff back in the day. My parents used to have the Nokia brick phone. 3310 I believe.

Eran - July 1, 2022, 8:05 am

This ol' brick.

Nokia 3310

I still remember the day my mum got it for me. It's the same day she let a stray dog sleep over on our balcony for the night since it was an insane thunderstorm outside. Ah, childhood... ?

Antonidon - July 1, 2022, 9:11 am

This beauty right here

Omniscient - July 1, 2022, 10:42 am

I had one as a gift from my wife in the late 90's. But I got rid of it because I was always somewhere with a landline basically. Paying monthly didn't seem worth it. Not sure what model it was but it wasn't small either.

But I did get the very first Google phone (G1) when it came out, which I still actually have.

I had the first Sidekick too.

I got the upgrade to a new Sidekick which was a color screen cost me $500. It was stolen within a week. I was so fucking pissed off. NYC is filled with degenerate thieves that will slit your throat for $10.

Oddly enough when I moved to Vegas. I didn't have a cell phone. I didn't want one. My wife again forced me to get one so she should contact me at her convenience. Personally I think I'd still not have one if it wasn't for her requiring me to get one. I actually don't like that anyone can contact me and disturb me anytime they want.

This is a throwback... I was probably ~10 at the time. I had a LG Mirror 1300i (could be wrong name but I had to google i).

Ohh man you had a roller coaster ride with your phone at an earlier stage. If i had my phone stolen 1 week after i paid for it, i would be weeping uncontrollably and then not take a phone for a while.

ohh and about you not wanting phone. I was watching an interview do not remember whose it was. He said it perfectly. My phone is for me to reach people when i would want to and it is not for the other way around. For me made total sense.

Considering it's the simplest phone I've ever had, I'm surprised it was actually one of the best.
