Thread: [\[FOR HIRE\] Python Developer looking to level up \Full Time / Contract Data + Pyth

leatherbag - July 5, 2022, 1:08 am

I have been freelancing as a Python Developer for almost 3 years. For the past year i am working as a data engineer as i have completed my first year i am looking to scale up and looking for better opportunities.

These are the skills i posses:

?Azure Certified (AZ-900, DP-203, DP-900)

?Azure Services (Azure Databricks, Azure DataFactory, Azure Synapse, Azure Blob, Azure Storage Explorere, Azure Data lake gen 2, Azure Cosmos DB)

? Automation & Web Scraping (Requests, Selenium, Regex)

? Data Analytics & Visualization (SQL, Pandas, Pyspark, Scikit-learn, Excel, Tableau, Matplotlib)

? API Creation & Web Development (NodeJS, Flask, Heroku, Netlify)

?ETL, Cloud & Linux Experience (Vim, Terminal Applications, SSH, AWS S3)

? General Purpose Programming Tasks (You name it)

What I am looking for

I think it is time for me to take the next step in my career.

I am hoping and looking for a -

remote contract-based

long term

data driven

programming role

I like looking at data and I love making sense from data. I like solving problems and I love solving problems programmatically. So if you are hiring for a data analyst, data engineer or a python developer hit me up.

Willing to join entry-level or mid-level position in data engineering, SQL Developer, DBA, Cloud/DevOps engineering or any data-driven or programming role, if there is an opportunity to learn on the job.

Time, Pay & Availability

? USD 35/Hour

? Available for 35 - 40 Hours per Week

? Availability (I can manage most of the timezones, as i have worked in different timezones in the past.)

? Available to work Immediately

If you're really looking to get 35$ an hour your best bet would be to search for a job somewhere else. Even on upwork people would work and do a decent job for a lot less. In most countries $35 an hour isn't entry level pay, sometimes not even mid level pay.

In fact maybe it would be better to find a full time job and actually sign a contract to be able to get this much.
