My official Mensa test, on paper my IQ is 164. By their official test I'm a superficial genius IQ, exactly 1 point higher than Einstein. Even though in the grand scheme that doesn't mean shit, because all the Mensa Test is, is Pattern Recognition. Even then I took the test in 2011 when I was 14. So the way they chart and the grading is different now. This test I scored 150 flat. Which would be consistent for the test as it presents itself. In the official Mensa test centre I can assure you, you'd face at a minimum 4-6x the questions, they will get far more mind boggling as you go along, the first 50 or so, there is a wrong answer. If you're getting the first 50 wrong, even 1% of them. You're average intelligence. After that, there are usually 3 wrong answers and 3 right to varying degrees etc. Once you pass a certain point, its about perception. They will ask you questions on why you answered A B or C+ in question 86 etc. And your answer goes towards the test. There is a lot involved. This test is only for the average to low-high IQs if you want a fairly accurate result. If you're above that, and blatantly so, you may want to visit Mensa themselves.

You may score higher on the official "official" test. But then you need to book in and visit an official mensa test centre. The real test is more in depth, and even though its like 95% pattern recognition just like this one, 5% is really more abstractly philosophical as weird as that sounds..

Einstein was never tested, so you couldn't possibly know that you're exactly 1 point higher than he was.

so I should not visit Mensa having a 115

Omniscient - July 8, 2022, 9:55 am

I took this test a few times over the years. Last time I took it my IQ took a hit and well, I guess I have gotten dumber with age. Or maybe I've finally killed enough brain cells to officially be a dumb ass. Or maybe MSM is having its desired effect.

In any case, don't feel like finding out I'm full retard one day.

Ultras - July 8, 2022, 10:05 am

These tests only made me more of a cocky prick than I already am so I stopped taking them neightworks. - July 8, 2022, 10:18 am

You're right. However most sources will cite Einsteins IQ as 160-163. I dont know where they get that figure from, but official sources put it on their charts for a reason.

I'm pretty sure they just do an intelligence match or something using his material and just benchmarked him around the Stephen Hawking level.

The test most likely isn't far off from what the actual IQ of an individual is.

But like you mentioned, some snowflakes on here can't handle the truth and don't want their egos bruised.

In the end, IQ is only slightly relevant to achieve whatever you want to do with your life.

I am not feeling anything in particular. If you are doing it for fun there is nothing wrong with it.

I just find it wierd that there is an average score and most people online always seem to score above that. I havent taken the test.

I find most people that do not stand on such forums like these to be.

if you take the logic of game ranks and applied here, you'd see that most are shit silver gold elo like the 85% and the rest 15% being an upper category.

taking this in account, an actual average score not so far off the results some (including me) got are not that much off.

This is the dumbest fucking argument as to why I would have "cheated".

If I would cheat, I would have done it right then and there.

What would have stopped me from cheating at the time you posted the thread?

Well done op, you proved the difference in our IQ is present.

No, they are words to prove your argument is based on fuck all.

This is time to back your statement up with actual arguments.

How am I a fraud?
How does your argument make sense?

You can't even answer those two questions...? Really?

Here's the problem your peanut sized brain didn't think about yet; Even if I take one of these official tests and send you proof of me whooping ur ass in every test imaginable, you will still say its fake.
Or am I in the wrong here?

Come on, answer those two questions I asked earlier and we'll go from there.
Stop embarrassing yourself.

No but the proof you will ask for is probably a screenshot which obviously can be faked.

Now, answer those questions you've been ignoring for the 3rd time. I'm waiting.

You don't even believe the screenshot I've sent of the test you linked because your ego can't handle I scored higher than you...
How am I supposed to believe you won't doubt the results of the actual test?

Done arguing. I proved my point.

You proved nothing dumbass lol

Your pretext to not do something is because I would ask proof that could be faked and in case deem it to be fake

Yet, I've pointed myself that there is a type of proof that can't be faked

the only thing You have proved is that You're retarded

How has retirement been going cowboy?

Maybe. People who do good on this test are more than likely to post their results versus the ones who don't do good likely won't. Makes it seem like a different picture than it is. There's probably a concept name for this or a heuristic name but I can't remember it.
