Thread: Is this guide still good for setting up a DDNS? :\) naxster - July 10, 2022, 4:58 am

Hello guys!

I'm trying to setup a DDNs, just to try out the RATs :)

I already have a Namecheap domain (that I haven't even touched, even though I bought it a long time ago), but I found this guide on this forum:

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=5590909>

Is this still a good guide to follow, or will Cloudflare just ban the account? Even though I will only have 1 RAT? :)

should be still working, but it would be much easier to just use a free dynamic dns provider, takes 30 seconds to setup one for example free dns afraid, dynu, duckdns or any other.

I'd rather pay instead of using a free DNS since I keep hearing it's better.

Also is DuckDNS or Dynu even trusted? I've heard that they ban the account even after 1 RAT :P

"trusted" doesn't exist online.

Any provider can suspend your account or refuse to provide service, doesn't matter if its paid or free. Your dns or host can last for hour, year or 10 years, you never know.

Yeah I know, if I could I would rather just host a DDNS on my own computer or even on my raspberry pi instead, since I'm not going to spread rats all over the place. I'm going to use on trusted computers. But I don't think that's possible without a DNS server.

But if that guide with namecheap + Cloudflare doesn't ban or close the account immediately, I might as well try it out :)

I tried DuckDNS before, but I keep reading in this Forum that we shouldn't use it (for some reason).

i think u better get your own DNS or host and redirect it to your pc manually

Also i'm using no-ip free account have no problem with it , since 2013 i guess or maybe more older , the same account still have the victims to this day while i'm speaking so its best for me i dont think i will be able to change the dns after this long time risk free idk bro i already heard that years ago but fact is , i leave all rat stuff and i back nowadays everything is the same just create the same host that already expired and victims comes up !

if you are not going to spread it and only run the rat on devices that you own then why would you even buy a dns, just use free one, most likely you will not get it suspended

I know, the thing is that I read from many threads on this forum that the free ones tends to ban the account. It might be with MANY rats, don't know. But $2 from Namecheap is already cheap enough.

Well, try that out yourself and you will get to know it?. Either way, its just $2 USD only so.
