Thread: Arrested by cops got my driver license taken away

Roberto Scorpius Malfoy - July 22, 2022, 3:01 pm

Gonna make the story short.

I got arrested yesterday for driving with illegal substances on my body, the cops said my eyes were a little bit red so decided to take me to the hospital to do some blood tests, I was smoking weed 24 hours before the arrest, is there a chance that the test shows negative?

I'M SO FUCKING PISSED.

UPDATES:

Got a paper a week ago I was on vacation.

They gave me my driver's license back because according to them I did not have any signs of THC in my blood however they found tetrahydrocannabinolsyra in my blood and because of that they decided to make an investigation which means that they will call me in during a specific period time to time and tell me to pee in a cup if I refuse I get my driver license revoked.

So no more drugs for me.

Gary - July 22, 2022, 3:02 pm

No. THC remains in your system for a while. Maybe don't drive while under the influence.

Wouldnt say that I'm a regular smoker, I had a break for 2 weeks before this week, and then this week I smoked 3 different days, and then I was clean for 24 hours and then they grabbed my ass.

I have heard that some ppl showed negative when they were clean for 24 hours it all depends how good your body clean the shit.

Bet you live in a red state right? Absolutely pathetic laws.

They should at the very least, give you field sobriety tests before arresting you and such. THC stays in your system a while, doesn't mean you're under the influence or impaired from driving.

N - July 22, 2022, 3:45 pm

Is weed legal in your country? If yes, who cares if it's in your system? They can't tell how high you were/are. It's not like alcohol.

If it's illegal in your country then rip, THC stays in your body for a while.

Depends on what type of testing we're talking about. Blood is about 4 hours, saliva is about 3 days, urine is about 30 days, and hair is about 90 days. Chances are you were urine tested, in which case you're SOL. I've never heard of someone being drug tested via blood, which would have been your only hope.

I'm not fat or tall..

I don't do exercise, after I was smoking the last day I walked for maybe 15 minutes, I was sleeping most of the day before the test because I was up at night eating and stuff..

Then 5 hours before the test, I was eating lots of meat together with potatoes.

This is one of many from the huge pile of reasons marijuana needs to be illegal and the law properly enforced. This red-eyed dope could've killed somebody, if not himself due to marijuana-induced psychosis first. The marijuana has brain damaged you if you think this selfish, reckless, immature behaviour is normal.

You should be pissed you ever used weed not that you rightly got caught. I hope you're given a hefty fine and/or prison for a meaningful duration. Though I doubt anything harsh enough to deter you from doing it again will be done, considering how soft society has become on junkie scum.

MentorPEN - July 23, 2022, 3:13 am

THC takes times to go out your system and you are toasted if you went for the test. 24 Hrs is too low to let weed out of your system, even alcohol takes 12-24 hrs and in some cases 48 hours, and this is weed we are talking about!

Crime 1) Smoking marijuana.

Crime 2) Driving intoxicated.

Crime 1 carries up to 6 months in Sweden, which is too short. Possession of marijuana used to carry up to 5 years (in some places).

Whether they had underlying conditions or not isn't highly important, for if you legalise weed, you'll get more people with comorbidities using it unwittingly, regardless. Marijuana is known to cause psychosis even in the healthy, read the story Henry's Demons. The website's aim is to build a correlation between violent crime and marijuana. Psychosis is already proven to increase your odds

I would do drug screens for companies and see many do this. It will show in the test that your urine is diluted. The company would either send you back again or not hire you. Most that get sent back again people think since they stopped smoking.

It wouldn't show up and guess what ends up showing up and the company wouldn't hire them. I seen it many times.

Blood tests typically detect recent cannabis use , or use that has occurred within the last 2 to 12 hours. However, in cases of heavy use, it's been detected 30 days after last use . Chronic heavy use increases the length of time that it can be detected.

The purpose for the drug test was to verify a suspected DUI. If his blood sample tests positive then he we will be "arrested" for DUI.

In Sweden, his license will be taken away for 1 year+ and he will be fined. He only risks jail time if he's been arrested before.

Makes sense. Does a DUI classify as 'Driving Under the Influence' specifically to alcohol?

Curious how they can tell from a blood-test if he was on substance during that specific period.

Usually a breathalyser is used over here.

I know Sweden are absolutely against weed, I went there once after smoking in Copenhagen, I was 100% honest to them, told them I had just smoked and had nothing with me, yet, they forced me at the border to leave the bus and go in and do a 360 naked w. squad in front of them.

They recently arrested Drake for having weed in a night club (Drakes crew) and also they arrested Snoop Dogg for having weed there.

From what I heard they use ELISA from SigmaAldrich for blood screening. according to the manufacturer it has a sensitivity of 1 ng/ml for THC.

I send out atleast 50 blood tests a shift and I'm telling you I can see everything going on in your body from the tests. It's so specific down to the blood cells it's not even funny.

I guarantee if you used any of the most common drugs within 24 hours I'd be able to see.

What a thread this has been. Pretty funny how non smokers put 'intoxication' with weed, although, sure, by definition i get it.

But we stoners ent killers, we know exactly what we're doing 100% of the time...

Unless of course you took a fat rip/dab and in that case you should not be driving.

For a small zoobie like you said, he's driving just like a normal driver, if anything he's more focused under the influence.

Not excessive smoking, and not smoking to drive... But if you need to drive and you've had a zoobie or two, you're fine. Unless you're new to weed or ripped a fat dab.

I am not a drinker nor smoker but if I get told that, little bit of a weed does not change your reaction time to avoid accidents, that's ok.

Ironic, here where I live, you can drink alcohol to a certain limit and not get fined but when it comes to weed, big no no.

From my experience, wherever I drive, I meet idiots using their right/left hand for the phone while driving or cucks not using blinkers causing us both to fast brake... yet you have stories like OP

You can't speak for everyone, yet you just made the claim that everyone who smokes knows what they're doing 100% of the time. And also assumed OP's reaction times weren't affected.

No i don't have any data to show you and if you don't wana believe it i don't care.

Being Active on the streets i have exposed myself to hundreds of stoners whom operate just fine. A little bit of weed ent gonn do no harm. It ent gonna hurt ur reaction time. Unless you're new or took fat dab.

I was forced to take a blood test immediately, so no chance of doing anything.

They put me in the car and went to the hospital with me and now I gotta wait until the blood tests show either positive or negative.

Most of the ppl I have spoken to has told me that it's impossible that the test shows negative since 24 hours is not enough for the blood to get clean.

(Aug 1, 2022 10:22 PM)ImportedGoods Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Where you live is weed illegal? Did they do roadside tests on the road when they pulled you over?

Basically, they stopped me because I was driving a little bit too fast, so they chased me and stopped me, they saw that two of my friends were high and decided to take the test on me because according to the whore who stopped me I had red eyes (that's a lie my eyes were just a bit tired it was around 12 at night) I explained to the bitch that I don't sleep good she didn't buy it.

Roberto Scorpious Malfoy - August 17, 2022, 10:57 am

UPDATES:

Got a paper a week ago I was on vacation.

They gave me my driver's license back because according to them I did not have any signs of THC in my blood however they found tetrahydrocannabinolsyra in my blood and because of that they decided to make an investigation which means that they will call me in during a specific period time to time and tell me to pee in a cup if I refuse I get my driver license revoked.

So no more drugs for me.

BiNBo - August 17, 2022, 11:03 am

I'd be contacting an attorney, at the very least the consultation is usually pro-bono. Seems pretty fucked to me, like if you live in a state where weed is illegal, but Delta-8 (Hemp or whatever they classify it as) is legal, then you might be able to get off.
