So i am looking to buy a long horse, not the shorter ones basically just a bit longer. Didnt know where to post so i post here.

I went looking for horses but they arent long, just normal or some are even short. Btw without the sharp feet just wanna avoid that You're probably looking for a shire, but on the low end, you're looking at 5k plus associated costs.

i know they are expensive and that was not the point of this thread, i just need to find a long horse that i have seen before. Could the horse be genetically engineered? it was literally longer than a car

There are a few different places you can buy a long horse. You can check your local feed stores, or you can look online. You can also check with breeders in your area. You may be able to find a long horse for sale at a horse show or auction.

There are a few places you can buy a short and wide horse. One option is to go to a horse ranch and purchase one. Another option is to go to a horse auction and bid on the horse you want. You can also look online for horse sellers and find one that way.

Best horses in the world are Syrian. They import them to many places in the world

Long Horse sounds like a Native American name. Just thought I'd share that.

Has a long horse been sourced yet.

Depending on where you live, you can also always look into rescue farms and see about adopting. Lots of amazing horses out there that just need a little TLC. Also a much cheaper option, but as I said, it really depends on where you live as to if this is an option.

I'm actually confused as fuck on what I just read. I'd say take the risk. Just show up to a place with horses with a check book and don't take no for an answer.
