It's a website that has compiled Psychology topics into easy to read modules. They have been compiled by psychology university professors to help facilitate free education for students. You can even download the ones you're interested as a PDF as many times as you want. All of this is free!

I stole this from Reddit, admittedly, but I can definitely see some useful tools in here, considering it's a tech-savvy forum.

Nice one. I would say the internet itself... The amount of knowledge gained from being on the internet is crazy.

The ability to learn a skill. Coding for example.

You'll get a long way watching free tutorials on YouTube.
