

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: aXpire --> Moola \(\$AXPR\) High Risk-Reward ratio

Luminox - September 12, 2022, 5:37 am

Hi, so there's 2 paths with this project, that has been delayed and rebranded completely.

1. This project is a scam, and has always been a scam. And they're always giving delays to avoid being sued. (ICO 20M in 2017-18)
2. This project has been lacking, probably because they stopped developping crypto apps since BTC dropped to like 3k and they thought it would die, now they're back on track trying to dev an app since crypto isn't dead and they can make huge money. And this is an easy x5-10-20? ++++

Even if it's a scam I believe there's money to be made if they put $ in marketing like they are saying they will, there's going to be at least a pump and dump before 2023. There's been crazy things going around in the TG saying that their sister company LSG isn't real, the main community manager left asking for a better paycheck, which caused the main drop from 0,0036 to 0,003. Now everyone seems to be chill in TG, there's literally only an handful of active holders.

Marketcap : 860K <https://coinmarketcap.com/currencies/axpr-token/>

With bare minimum marketing and some campaigns, this is an easy x10. In a bullrun x100. No financial advice, if you guys find that this project is officially a scam and a fraud let me know. They are registered in UK, idk about US (originally from). ?

<https://www.trymoola.com/news/moola-progress-report-29-august>

Porn - September 12, 2022, 6:33 am

I wouldn't waste your time/money on a low market cap dying project, even if the team is legit.

You're suggesting a marketing campaign will save the project, here is how I see it; project is delisted from HitBTC due to low trade volume ($0.03 cents traded in the last 24 hours) and then KuCoin delisting next. Leaving it with no centralized exchanges to trade on, maybe in a year or two they even stop paying for the hosting of the website.

Luminox - September 12, 2022, 7:42 am

(Sep 12, 2022 06:33 AM)Porn Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I wouldn't waste your time/money on a low market cap dying project, even if the team is legit.

You're suggesting a marketing campaign will save the project, here is how I see it; project is delisted from HitBTC due to low trade volume ($0.03 cents traded in the last 24 hours) and then KuCoin delisting next. Leaving it with no centralized exchanges to trade on, maybe in a year or two they even stop paying for the hosting of the website.

I'm not suggesting that it will save the project, i'm suggesting that there is money to be made on a such low mcap and that the risk-reward ratio is very good. Can jump easily to few mills with $$ injected as marketing + release of a decent product + great yield offers. [warn]

Omniscient - September 12, 2022, 8:21 am

It's a scam.

<https://www.axpr.io/>

"Cutting edge FinTech, trusted by enterprises"

They lie to you in huge bold letters right on their index page.

Don't push bullshit here.