Thread: Hurricane Ian: Cities flooded and power cut as storm crosses Florida

The Pact - September 29, 2022, 4:04 am

Dramatic scenes saw a hospital roof blown off, cars submerged and trees ripped out of the ground.

Ive been following a bit of it online, its absolutely devastating what mother nature is doing

Livewire - October 4, 2022, 7:10 pm

Sucks for those affected by it. By the time it made it near where I live all we got was a little wind and some showers.

Pat13nt_Zer0 - October 4, 2022, 8:10 pm

yeah, this no power shit blows!

Its hotter than 2 foxes fucking in a forest fire

How long have you been without power?

I have a generator but gas is super limited and even then you have to wait in line for hours to get it?

Sorry to hear this. How much daily check in did you lose. I lost the award so many times. My worst was I lost it at 68% because somehow I thought I'd done it when I hadn't. I had late night work and missed it.

not entirely sure definitely wasn't 68% but i think was more than I had gotten ever, I was determined this time and well mother nature said "Nope"
Still no power but once i can ill be back on it. I never fully understood how much I need the internet lol to keep some what sane?
Starting to rethink this whole "pray for a zombie apocalypse" thing.....

But you obviously have your mobile data though? Are you hot or cold?

u not sure what you mean...

SteveTobbs - October 8, 2022, 2:15 pm

Yes, this is strong. Florida faces grim reality: Hurricane Ian is deadliest storm in state since 1935.

Does that prove climate change creates stronger storms? Probably not.

Some horrific videos around social media..

Hope everyone can remain safe, and recover

You lost power? I wondered if you were suffering from no air conditioning or no heating?

Oh lol, no air conditioning for like 9 days. I mean I have a generator but with it being almost impossible to get gas we can only run it so much. It was the craziest shit I think I have ever seen, lines blocks long for gas people literally waiting from like midnight to 8pm next day in line and even then there was no guarantee pumps wouldn't go dry b4 getting to it. ?

Ty, its all good tho. Half our town is literally missing power is back (still no wifi ? but in my opinion this was the universe telling us to get our shit together. It was kind of getting bad around here with all the bullshit and absent morals. If that makes sense lol

Which absent morals would that be? God promised he would not do another flood remember?
